A GREAT POWER MENACES TURKEY

Kiamil Pasha Declares That a European Conflict Is Now Threatened.

APPEALS FOR ENGLISH AID

ADRIANOPLE IS THREATENED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 21.—Turkish fears of a European intrigue are disclosed in dispatches from the correspondents of The Times and The Daily Chronicle at Constantinople. The Daily Chronicle's correspondent telegraphs:

"Information has just come to the Porte which foreshadows grave eventualities owing to dissensions in the European concert and the possibility of the armed intervention of a certain power. In a sentence, Turkey, at war with four nations, now fears military action by a fifth.

"In view of this situation, Kiamil Pasha, President of the Council, whom I saw to-day, desires to make a special appeal to England on various points. First of all, he expressed the hope that the English people would utterly disregard King Ferdinand's incitement to make a holy war of the struggle, pitting the Cross against the Crescent. The language of the King of Bulgaria he considers degrading and an attempt to cloud the real issue by the introduction of a religious factor.

"'This war,' said Kiamil Pasha, 'is likely to be bitter enough without letting loose religious passions. The Ottoman Government condemns it in the strongest possible manner.'

"We condemn this pernicious attempt of a so-called Christian monarch to unchain fanaticism, with all its attendant evils. Turkey is fully aware that King Ferdinand's appeal to the worst of all human passions is chiefly intended for the gallery.'

"I am convinced," added Kiamil Pasha, "that the boasted humanity of Europe is dead and has been replaced by a skeleton, the dry bones of which shake only in the wind, when the selfishness and avariciousness of certain powers compel an appeal to the old spirit of humanity. King Ferdinand's hand is but that of a puppet, selected to strike at Turkey's heart.

"'I hope that England will be true to her splendid past and stand by us unflinchingly in the approaching hour of national peril. If we needs must fight out this unnecessary and futile war with the federated States, surely England is powerful and influential enough to see that the ring is not rushed, to see that Turkey is not assailed from another quarter while fighting for her life with her first foes.

"'As an old man, with one foot in the grave, I express with all seriousness the fear that the Balkan war will be a prelude to a gigantic struggle, involving Europe.

"'England has always been a sincere friend of international peace and of the integrity of Turkey. She has no Balkan axe to grind. Therefore we warn her now that we are threatened by a new enemy.

"'England's professed friendship for Turkey may shortly be put to a severe test. Turkey has nothing to gain by the present war, neither has Bulgaria if the powers are sincere in their expressed intention to maintain the status quo. Although provoked to the contest, Turkey will always be willing to hearken to counsels of peace, with due safeguards for the national dignity and honor.'"

Bulgarian Line 300 Miles Long.

The Bulgarians are invading Turkey across a line nearly 300 miles in length, and the Turks are falling back without offering any effective opposition. The Bulgarians' objective is apparently Adrianople, toward which city at least three Bulgarian columns are moving, and it is there that the first big battle is expected, within the next few days.

A Sofia dispatch says that the Bulgarian Left Army pushed forward to Kirk-Kilisseh, some thirty-three miles east of Adrianople, and shelled the town yesterday, and its fall is imminent. The Bulgarian advance guards have taken hundreds of prisoners near Adrianople.

It is pointed out that there are numerous roads leading from Kirk-Kilisseh southward to the railway, which is the main artery of the Turkish Army. By following them it would be possible for the Bulgarians to get behind the Turks and cut off their retreat.

The Bulgarian Centre has occupied Mustapha-Pasha, twenty miles from Adrianople, without serious resistance, inasmuch as the Bulgarian loss is stated to be only fourteen wounded.

The Bulgarian Right appears to have crossed the frontier west of Mustapha-Pasha, and then to have turned southward to that place, capturing the town of Djumabala, all the Turks in the vicinity retiring behind the River Mesta.

Small Bulgarian columns are vigorously attacking in other directions, having entered Turkey by at least three different routes, making a total of six columns invading Turkey. One col-

JOB HEDGES LAID UP.

He's Tired Out and Has a Cold—May Discontinue Speeches.

Job E. Hedges, the Republican candidate for Governor, is under the care of a physician at the Hotel Martinique. His strenuous work on Saturday night, when in a tour of the city he made about twenty-five speeches, lasting well into Sunday morning, and a severe cold which he caught on his last up-State trip, have forced Mr. Hedges to discontinue his speechmaking, for a time at least. Mr. Hedges was scheduled to leave this morning on another up-State trip. It will be postponed if his condition does not improve.

Mr. Hedges was advertised to speak last night at the Manhattan Congregational Church, Broadway and Seventy-sixth Street, and several hundred persons were kept waiting a long time before they learned that Mr. Hedges wouldn't appear. One of his managers, Thomas Moore, was informed of the candidate's illness, and he was asked to go to the church and read one of Mr. Hedges's speeches. Just as Mr. Moore was leaving his home, however, his young daughter was severely burned by the explosion of a celluloid comb, and he forgot all about the church meeting.

Ex-Congressman Herbert Parsons was substituted for Mr. Hedges, and about half of those present went home as soon as Mr. Parsons began to speak. The other half listened for a time and then began to interrupt.

SECRETARY KNOX TO RETIRE.

On March 4, Says Pittsburgh Dispatch, Whether Taft Is Elected or Not

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 20.—In an inspired statement this morning The Pittsburgh Dispatch, for many years the organ of Secretary Knox, announces his determination to retire from public life on March 4 next, no matter what the result of the pending elections.

The statement is made in a telegram from Washington over the name of L. W. Strayer, a Washington correspondent, who has been intrusted with a number of Secretary Knox's announcements, and who assisted in the campaign for the Republican nomination for Knox four years ago.

"Secretary Knox had fully determined to give up public life before this year's political issues developed," says the statement. "He will adhere to this determination, it is stated, unless a deadlock in the election of a President or Vice President should cause the duties of acting President to devolve upon him. Mr. Knox will not evade this responsibility if it should come about, but if an election is secured on Nov. 5 he will make arrangements to retire from public life at the close of the present Administration, after eleven years in the public service as Senator and Cabinet officer."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—On the eve of Secretary of State Philander C. Knox's return to Washington from his special mission to the funeral of the Japanese Emperor, Pennsylvanians here are saying that he will retire from public life next March, whether President Taft is re-elected or not. In the absence of Mr. Knox the report cannot be confirmed definitely, but it fits in with rumors recently circulating in apparently informed quarters.

Two other well-known Pennsylvania Republicans who will return to private life next March are Representatives John Dalzell of Pittsburgh and Martin E. Olmsted of Harrisburg. Mr. Dalzell, who ranks with Sereno Payne of New York as a stand-pat authority on the tariff, has been defeated for renomination. Mr. Olmsted, who was a prominent figure in Speaker Cannon's circle, announced his voluntary retirement some time ago, for personal reasons.

Carmi Thompson of Ohio, the secretary to the President, has indicated that he will retire from the office on March 4, even if President Taft is re-elected.

GIRL KILLS A MAN IN PLAY.

MAHWAH, N. J., Oct. 20.—Leo Hammond, a boarder in the home of John Harris, was shot to death last evening as a result of his constant teasing of fifteen-year-old Alice Winters, who works in the Harris household. The girl is the daughter of a neighboring farmer, and after she had cleared off the dinner table and washed the dishes last night she sat down on the front porch to talk with the boarders for a few moments before going home.

Hammond, who was there with the other boarders, teased the girl about the boys of the neighborhood, calling them "yokels" and "rubes." She endured the chaffing good naturedly, but pretended to become greatly enraged under the constant fire. Laughingly she declared that if he did not stop she would surely shoot him.

Then, springing up, she rushed into the hallway and seized a shotgun that was always kept in readiness there for chicken hawks. Still laughing, and not dreaming that it was loaded, she leveled the gun at the young man and pulled both triggers. When the smoke had drifted away Hammond was found dead with the charge of both barrels in his breast. The girl became hysterical and was taken to her father's home.

On the testimony of those who had been on the porch the coroner pronounced it a case of accidental shooting and refused to arrest the girl.

CHASE THIEVES IN TAXICABS.

Detectives Run Down Men Who Confess to Many Robberies.

Detective Fitzsimmons was passing the United Cigar Store at Broadway and Fifty-third Street early yesterday morning when he saw two men in the shop putting cigars, cigarettes, and coupons into a bag. He summoned Detectives Burgess, Ownes, and McGee, and they entered the store, two from the floor above and two through the basement.

When the thieves heard them they dropped their loot, ran from the store and down Broadway. The detectives followed them in taxicabs, firing some twenty shots before the men surrendered at Fifty-first Street.

When arraigned in the West Side Court yesterday the two thieves, who said they were George Bond of 760 Eleventh Avenue and Michael Kirby of the same address, admitted that they had committed many small robberies, most of them in United Cigar Stores, in the last two months. They boasted that in one night they had entered fourteen houses, all in one block. They said they had obtained 75,000 cigar coupons on a previous visit to the same Broadway store.

CRAZED BY EFFORT TO TALK.

Deaf Mute Had Learned a Few Words After Years of Silence.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Oct. 20.—Hiram Black, a deaf-mute, 35 years old, has apparently become crazed through his efforts to learn to talk. Up to last year Black could not say a word, but about Christmas time he had acquired the ability to say a few words, such as "Good morning," "Nice day," "Going to rain." He could not tell how he learned to speak, but expressed himself as satisfied that some day he would talk fluently.

In the past week he had shown evidence of a weakened mind, and Robert Marling, his uncle, with whom he lived, appealed to officials for protection. Sheriff Finnegan took Black to-day to the Givens Sanitarium for ten days' observation, upon an order of Judge Tierney of the Greenwich Probate Court.

GIVES LIFE SAVINGS TO SERVIA FOR WAR

PROF. PUPIN GIVES $10,000

And in Stirring Call for Men and Money Attacks the Powers for Their Deceit and Treachery.

The fervid eloquence and generosity of Milan Yovanowich, a middle-aged, shabbily-clad immigrant farmer from Montana, stirred the Serb mass meeting in the Amsterdam Opera House yesterday afternoon to fanatical enthusiasm. Yovanowich easily shared the honors of the meeting with Prof. M. F. Pupin, who holds the chair of electro-mechanics and is Director of the reasearch laboratories at Calumbia University.

Prof. Pupin was Chairman of the meeting, which was held for the purpose of raising funds for the assistance of the Serb peoples now embroiled in the war of the Balkan States against Turkey. Montenegrins and Servians to the number of 500 filled the small hall, at least 100 of the auditors being women. Plain clothes policemen under the direction of Detective Frank Upton, of the Central Office Bureau were scattered about the auditorium or seated unostentatiously at the rear of the platform, wearing revolvers in holsters strapped about their waists under their coats.

The presence of the detectives was explained by one of the executive members of the Serb Federation on the ground that fears had been entertained that Turks might invade the meeting and take a pot shot from the gallery at Prof. Pupin, who is the honorary Servian Consul to the Port of New York.

The sum of $16,000 was raised at the meeting, $10,000 of which was donated by the Chairman and $5,000 by Milan Yovanowich, the Servian farmer from the West, who entered the hall a stranger and departed a hero. The remaining $1,000 was the result of voluntary contributions on the part of the audience, the individual gifts varying from $1 to $10.

In Rebellion Against the Powers.

When Prof. Pupin called the meeting to order at 3 o'clock the air was electric with subdued emotion. Speaking in Servian, he recited the causes of the war and the necessity of the Serbs in this country coming to the assistance of their fellow-countrymen. Seated on the platform was Adolph Levy, a real estate broker, who translated for the benefit of THE TIMES reporter the remarks of the various speakers.

"This war is a revolution against Turkish oppression and a rebellion against European diplomacy," announced Prof. Pupin. "It is directed not only against the Turks, who are our hereditary enemies and conscienceless foes, but it is a protest to the powers against the violated Treaty of Berlin, which was signed in 1878 and was formulated to protect the Balkan States from territorial exploitation, and which guaranteed to restore to the Serbs of Macedonia the country which was wrested from them by Turkey.

"This is not a war for territorial expansion on our part. We are not seeking to acquire the territory of other nations, but to safeguard and to protect that which is ours and to restore to the Serbs of Macedonia the country which rightfully belongs to them.

"The Serb peoples must stand together in this holy cause. It is the fight of the Balkan States not only against Turkey, but against a continuance of perfidious European diplomacy.

"It is the Christian against the Moslem, civilization against barbarism, justice against tyranny, perfidy, and oppression. To arms, then, fellow-Serbs! To arms, ye followers of Christ! Set free your brothers in Macedonia. Save your women from the Turk, your daughters from the menace of the harem; your brother Serbs from massacre and pillage."

Prof. Pupin then explained that the purpose of the meeting was primarily to raise funds for the Red Cross in the Baltic and "for other purposes."

"The money which you give will relieve the suffering families of our fighting men. It will feed the mouths which will be hungry and provide shelter for the thousands who will be homeless. It will provide field hospitals for the wounded, and bury our glorious dead in honorable graves. When other speakers on this platform have addressed you I will start the subscription myself."

The address of the Chairman evoked a remarkable demonstration. Roughly dressed men in the audience embraced each other, and women sobbed. Shouts of applause rent the air, and the floor resounded under the energetic approval of a thousand stamping feet.

Thomas Sargentich, cashier of the Fourth Avenue Bank for Savings, followed Prof. Pupin and urged the audience to be generous.

"We want to raise $25,000 within the next few days, and we expect that you will open your purse strings this afternoon and help us. Let each give according to his means. If you are true Servians—if you are true Montenegrins—do not confine your patriotism to cheers. Noise is not going to win for us. Your acts must prove your sincerity."

Nikolas Lakich, a railroad and steamship ticket agent of this city, and Gabriel Kommenitch of 156 Fifth Avenue, also made addresses, after which occurred the most dramatic incident of the gathering.

Gives $5,000 of His $7,000 Savings.

Prof. Pupin had once again taken his stand on the front of the platform, and in quiet tones had announced that he contributed the sum of $10,000 to the fund which was to be raised. Then a long-mustached, thick-set man of about 45 years, arose in the body of the hall, and amid the clamor of applause which had greeted the announcement of Prof. Pupin's donation, walked quietly down the aisle to a spot directly in front of the platform.

When the cheering subsided he suddenly threw his right arm aloft to command attention and began to speak in a strong, resonant voice which carried to all parts of the hall. His high boots, flannel shirt open at the throat, and travel-stained garments made him an interesting figure, as did the fierce intensity with which he uttered every word and the emphatic gestures with which he accompanied his remarks.

"I am Milan Yovanowich," he began, "and I have come all the way from my farm in Montana to talk to my fellow-

NURSE'S ERROR KILLS WOMAN IN HOSPITAL

VICTIM A YOUNG MOTHER

Nurse Swoons When Mistake Is Discovered and Is Herself Near Death as a Result of the Shock.

Hovering between life and death, Florence Harris, a nurse, lies unconscious in the Yonkers Homeopathic and Maternity Hospital, prostrated by the knowledge that an unfortunate error on her part resulted early yesterday morning in the death of a patient under her charge. The victim was Mrs. Abram Haight of 8 Yonkers Avenue, who three days ago gave birth to a baby boy in the hospital. Her death was caused through the unwitting substitution by Miss Harris of oxalic acid for epsom salts. Although the hospital authorities and the bereaved husband of her victim exonerate the nurse from any blame, the latter became unconscious when informed of her mistake and its fatal consequences and grave fears are entertained for her reason should she recover.

Mrs. Haight had been doing extremely well since the birth of her three-day-old son, and at 6 o'clock yesterday morning the physician in attendance directed that the nurse should give her a cathartic. Miss Harris hastened to the hospital pharmacy, and carefully measured out the required dose from a bottle on the shelf on which epsom salts were kept. Even to her accustomed eyes the innocent, white crystals presented the appearance of the familiar salts, and she returned to the sickroom after dissolving the salts in a small quantity of water.

Immediately after the dose had been administed the patient began to experience severe pains, and tossed about in such agony as to alarm the nurse. In a few minutes she was seized with convulsions, and before a physician could reach the bedside it was evident that she was dying. Ten minutes after she had swallowed the dose Mrs. Haight passed away.

An investigation was immediately begun by Dr. R. Oliver Phillips of the medical board of the hospital. Shaken by the unexpected death of her patient, Miss Harris led the physician to the pharmacy store room, and confidently indicated the bottle from which she had taken the prescribed dose. Near the bottle was a similar one containing what appeared to be the same crystalline salts.

Examination revealed the fact that in some inexplicable fashion a bottle of oxalic acid had been placed side by side with the one containing the harmless cathartic. As soon as she was informed of the mistake which she had made, Miss Harris swooned, and at an early hour this morning it was said that she had not recovered consciousness.

Mrs. Haight was 26 years old, and had been married five years. The son to whom she gave birth last Friday was her first child.

Miss Harris is 23 years old, and is in her senior year in the hospital. She has always enjoyed a splendid reputation for carefulness and fidelity.

Dr. Phillips in behalf of the hospital last night issued the following statement, in the course of which he exonerates Miss Harris from all blame:

> Mrs. Alice Haight, wife of Abram Haight of 8 Yonkers Avenue, died suddenly early Sunday morning at the Yonkers Homeopathic Hospital and Maternity, under circumstances now under investigation by the hospital authorities. She had given birth to a boy three days before. The nurse who was in attendance upon the patient was so prostrated by the occurrence that she became unconscious and has remained so ever since, so that no statement could be obtained from her. It would seem that a quantity of oxalic acid was administered to the patient in mistake for epsom salts, which closely resembles it in form and appearance. The hospital authorities have not yet learned how the acid found its way into the institution, but a quantity was afterward found near the epsom salts. It was not in use by the physicians or nurses, and was not kept by the pharmacy, and was possibly left behind by some cleaner. The attendant is considered a competent nurse, and has had about two years' training at the hospital. The night supervisor and resident physician gave the patient immediate attention and summoned at once the attending physician. The deplorable occurrence seems to have been an unforeseen accident.

When Mr. Haight was notified of his wife's death and manner of its occurrence he was prostrated with grief. He had recovered sufficiently last night to make public his attitude in the matter. He spoke most gently of the stricken nurse, and was emphatic in asserting that he desired to attach no blame to her.

"The poor, little girl!" he remarked brokenly. "I know only too well that she did not know what she was doing. There she is lying in the hospital, practically dying, and they tell me that she will in all probability lose her mind as the result of this. I do think, however, that the investigation by the city and hopsital authorities should be extensive with respect to the question as to how the acid came to be mixed with the medicines that no more lives can be lost through similar mistakes."

Coroner Alfred A. Iles and Police Chief Wolf stated last night that a thorough investigation would be made. At the hospital Dr. E. C. Mott, chief of staff, declined to state where the family of Miss Harris reside.

"I have received a request from the family not to divulge their address to the newspapers, or to occasion them any further anxiety than that from which they are now suffering. I intend to respect that request until the inquest has been held."

1,000 KILLED IN PHILIPPINES.

Four Unidentified Americans Among the Victims of the Typhoon.

MANILA, Oct. 20.—The typhoon which swept over several of the Philippine Islands on Oct. 16 resulted in the death of more than a thousand persons.

Four unidentified Americans—three men and a little girl—were among those killed.

The coasting steamer Tayabas foundered off Escalante. The bodies of fifteen Filipinos and Spaniards were swept ashore.

WILL CALL BECKER, ACCEPTING RISK

Perjury May Be Charged in Testimony Showing Becker Did Not Meet Conspirators After Murder.

John F. McIntyre, attorney for Lieut. Charles Becker, announced last night that the decision had finally been reached to put the accused Lieutenant on the stand in his own behalf at his trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, which will be resumed this morning before Justice Goff.

Becker himself is eager for the test, and believes he can triumph over the prosecution if he appears in court as the leading champion of his own cause. While Mr. McIntyre admits that there are strong considerations against calling Becker as a witness, he has the strongest confidence that his client will make a good impression on the jury in the face of the fiercest cross-examination.

The greatest danger to Becker in appearing for himself is that District Attorney Whitman may be allowed to question him as to the size and sources of his supposed wealth, but Mr. McIntyre has strong hopes that the ruling of Justice Goff excluding testimony as to the bank accounts of Becker will be again applied on cross-examination to prevent the District Attorney from forcing the accused Lieutenant to answer questions relating to the charge of graft.

If Mr. McIntyre holds to the plans which he announced last night, Becker will take the stand to-morrow or the following day. Mr. McIntyre said last night that he would have twenty other witnesses. Their testimony will be aimed to discredit the stories of Rose, Vallon, Schepps, and Webber, and to prove that the conspiracy to kill Herman Rosenthal originated with them and did not involve Becker. Many of these witnesses, Mr. McIntyre admitted, belonged to the underworld. This, he said, must necessarily be the case, since only men of their own type could be expected to know the movements of "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose and the rest. Mr. McIntyre refused to name any of these witnesses. He said:

"To tell the names of these men would mean that they would at once be dragged down to the Criminal Court Building by the District Attorney, and there questioned, harassed, and threatened with being called before the Grand Jury. That has been the procedure in regard to most of our witnesses whom he has discovered. No criminal trial ever before saw such an unfair exercise of power on the part of a District Attorney."

It was learned last night that an indictment for perjury might be asked against one of the witnesses for the defense who testified last week. It was stated that evidence had been discovered by the prosecution that the story told by this witness, tending to show that Becker did not meet Rose, Vallon or Webber on the night of the murder, was concocted by friends of Lieut. Becker in the Police Department, and that its falsity could be sufficiently established to make a strong case of perjury.

District Attorney Whitman said yesterday that he was pretty well acquainted with the witnesses whom the defense would bring forward, and that he was prepared with their records, and would be able to discredit them. He said that he considered the case for the prosecution had been greatly strengthened by the witnesses whom the defense had so far produced. He said he was highly pleased with the progress of the trial so far, but refused to predict the outcome. When Mr. McIntyre was asked what he expected the jury to do, he exclaimed:

"Acquit! What else can they do?"

Mr. McIntyre admitted that he feared the ruling of the court in regard to Sam Schepps would be that he was a material witness and not an accomplice. This question is one which may have a critical bearing on the verdict, as the ruling that Schepps was himself a conspirator in the murder would be a heavy blow to the prosecution.

Mr. McIntyre indicated last night that he might invade the camp of the prosecution for another witness. Believing that valuable evidence on their side was obtained when District Attorney Whitman was called to testify, the defense has now under consideration the calling of Assistant District Attorney Moss, who has had much to do with the preparation of the case against Becker. If Mr. Moss is placed on the stand as a witness for Becker the defense will try to make him admit that witnesses for the State were procured by coercion.

Mr. McIntyre complained again yesterday of the rate of speed at which the trial was being forced by Justice Goff, and predicted the breakdown of himself, the District Attorney, or one of the jurors if the pace was not slackened this week.

It was learned yesterday that Thomas Coupe, former night clerk of the Elks' Club, who fled to England because he said his life was threatened if he should appear as a witness against Becker will not be called as a witness at the Becker trial. His story that he was frightened out of the country by friends of Becker, it is said, will be made the subject of a Grand Jury investigation.

Rose, Vallon, Schepps, and Webber, who testified against Becker last week, said yesterday at the West Side Prison that they were pleased to have the ordeal over. One thing for which they were particularly thankful was that they had not been called upon to identify "Dago Frank," "Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louie," and "Whitey" Lewis. The four witnesses for the State expected that they would be asked to point out the gunmen and they dreaded it.

At the Tombs it was learned yesterday that there was danger of a split between the gunmen which may lead to every man's looking out for himself and competition among them for the first chance to get immunity or a promise of leniency by turning State's evidence. The first change in the stubborn front of the four gangsters was caused last Thursday, when Mrs. Louis Rosenberg, the wife of "Lefty Louie," took the stand to testify for the State.

Although her statement had but little bearing on the Becker case, it created a panic among the gunmen, because, when she is allowed to tell her whole story, it may be conclusive against the actual murderers. She was not asked last week to tell what she had learned during the time that her husband and "Gyp the Blood" were in hiding in the flat in Brooklyn, but she did state that she had resolved to testify for the prosecution.

Between the wives of "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood," who are confined in the House of Detention, there is also said to be the bitterest feeling. The latter, Mrs. Harry Horowitz, remains steadfastly loyal to her husband and his pals.

By special permit a sight-seeing automobile was allowed to make a trip through Central Park yesterday afternoon with the Becker jury. After touring the Park, they were taken for a ride on Riverside Drive and back to the Murray Hill Hotel for dinner at 6 o'clock. Aside from this, they spent the day at the hotel under the strictest supervision, to enforce the rules of the court in regard to reading or conversation bearing on the trial. Newspapers carefully expurgated of reports or editorials relating to the trial, were read.

DIAMONDS MORE COSTLY.

Demand Exceeds Supply, Says London Dealer—Other Stones Dearer.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—"Diamonds are dearer and the cost of all precious stones is rising. Last week there was an increase of from 5 to 10 per cent., the cost of all precious stones having gone up 15 per cent., and these increases are likely to continue," said a prominent Hatton Garden merchant. "The ever-growing demand for diamonds is exceeding the supply. There are thus smaller supplies at bigger prices. The demand from the United States is very great.

"In the last ten years prices have advanced 300 per cent. The making of colored stones and fashionable sapphires has gone up 50 per cent. Emeralds are much more expensive. Pearls have become enormously costly."

L. W. HILL CARRIED VALISE.

Then Struck Terror Into Porter Who Neglected an Aged Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 20.—When an aged woman crossed the main waiting room of the Union Station with a heavy valise yesterday, a porter made no effort to assist her. A man with a red beard approached the woman, took her burden, and helped her on a train. He then returned to the porter.

"Couldn't you have carried that valise?" he asked.

"Well, what do you care?" was the reply.

Indignation blazed in the other's eyes.

"I have some interest in the matter. I am Louis W. Hill," he said.

The porter knew the man with that name was Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Great Northern Railway. He immediately looked for another job.

AUTO EXPLOSION BURNS 40.

They Were Members of the Crowd That Watched the Blazing Car.

PETALUMA, Cal., Oct. 20.—Forty persons were burned severely in an automobile explosion here to-day, which may cost the lives of Mayor Zartman of this town and three others.

A crowd gathered about a burning automobile that had been dragged from a garage. Mayor Zartman, who is a former Chief of the Fire Department, responded to the fire alarm and attacked the blaze with a chemical extinguisher. The Mayor was thrown forty feet by the explosion which followed.

James Mott, Maurice and W. Brandon were enveloped in flames, and rescued a few moments later at the point of death. The crowd was swept by a blast of flame, and several persons were trampled upon in the panic.

Thirty victims of the accident were treated at a local hospital. Every nurse in Petaluma has been engaged, and others have been summoned from San Francisco.

WOULD BOYCOTT JOHNSON.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 20.—The Minneapolis Commercial Club has issued the following statement on the arrest of Jack Johnson, the pugilist, for the abduction of Lucile Cameron of Minneapolis:

"To the press: As the result of the atrocious and despicable acts of Jack Johnson, a negro, a blur has been brought upon the name of Minneapolis. Regardless of the character of the woman involved, it is decidedly a blur, one which is sent to the furthest ends of the United States, connecting with it the name of Minneapolis.

"Johnson's defiance of the law, disregard of clean morals, and his other numerous crimes, should not be tolerated nor put forth in public print in any form or manner. It is time suppression is made of his name. There should be a general protest throughout the country to the use of the name of this man in publications of all sorts after this present scandal subsides."

BREAK IN CUBAN CABINET.

Secretary of Interior Quits and Others May Follow.

HAVANA, Oct. 20.—The Cuban Secretary of the Interior, Señor Laredo Bru, whose department is vested with the control of the rural guard and the regular army, tendered his resignation to-night and insisted upon its acceptance. He is charged by the Conservatives with favoritism for the Zayistas in the Presidential campaign. Other Cabinet resignations are impending.

President Gomez is said to contemplate the issuance of a proclamation declaring himself actively in command of all the armed forces in place of Major Gen. Monteagudo. Gen. Menocal, the Conservative candidate for the Presidency, and other Conservative leaders held a long conference to-day with President Gomez protesting against his action.

The President said he had no intention of relieving Gen. Monteagudo of his command or of assuming personal command of the forces. He reiterated, however, his determination to take all measures to insure a fair and peaceful election.

AFLAME ON A LAUNCH.

Three Men Jump Overboard and Are Rescued Uninjured.

The engine of the twenty-five-foot gasoline launch The Skipper behaved beautifully all day yesterday, when three friends of its owner, Edward McCullough of 306 Bradhurst Avenue, had it up the Hudson, but it began to give trouble toward dusk, as the launch was sliding swiftly downstream off Fort Washington Point. William McBride of 207 West 141st Street was in charge, and as soon as he discovered that the carburetor was leaking he suggested that M. J. Van Vliet of the same address come forward with the lantern. Van Vliet did so, and the gasoline ignited. There was a spurt of flame, and then an explosion, and the three—the third was Edward Brooks of 401 West Thirty-fifth Street—were aflame in a second.

They plunged into the Hudson, from which they were picked up, weary and wet, but not seriously the worse for their mishap, by William Fernley of 517 West 129th Street, who came alongside in his motorboat, the Myrtle.

So brilliant was the illumination from the blazing launch that every small craft in the Hudson started immediately to the rescue, and there was a regular fleet assembled before The Skipper had burned to the water's edge.

ROOSEVELT OFF FOR HOME TO-DAY

BULLET OUTSIDE HIS RIB

OBEYS THE ORDER FOR REST

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—On the restraint to be exercised to-morrow not alone by Col. Roosevelt but by those who admire him will depend much as to his recovery from his wound. It has been decided that he is to leave the Mercy Hospital to-morrow morning for his home at Oyster Bay. There are misgivings among his physicians and friends, however. It is probable that the journey will do him no real harm if he pays full heed to the counsel of the physicians who will accompany him. He is disposed to do this, for he had a sharp lesson yesterday, when he found that he had not the strength to engage in strenuous political discussion. But should crowds gather around his car when it stops, cheer him, and insist on seeing him it is feared that he may become excited and overtax himself.

According to the present plans, Col. Roosevelt is to leave Chicago at 8:08 o'clock to-morrow morning on the Pennsylvania Railroad. It has been thought better that he should travel on one of the slower trains, and he will not arrive in New York until 8:08 o'clock the next morning. He will leave there for Oyster Bay at once, arriving there about 9 o'clock.

It is with reluctance that the physicians have consented to the journey. They have done so only because Col. Roosevelt has been so restless here, and it is felt that perhaps in his own home he can be shielded better from the importunities of friends. He is by no means so strong as he thinks, and the mature judgment of his friends is that he should stay in the Mercy Hospital for at least a week longer. Even though he rested absolutely to-day, he was very tired from the strain of yesterday. He, however, cannot be convinced of his weakness, and is planning campaign activity within a few days. His friends say they can merely pray that his rashness in taking the trip to New York may have no ill effects, but none of them is any too certain of it.

Anxiety of the Physicians.

The anxiety of the physicians in the matter is shown in these bulletins to-day. The first one, issued at 10:05 this morning, read:

> Pulse and temperature normal. The patient continues to improve.
> Col. Roosevelt suffered somewhat from overtaxing himself yesterday. There is somewhat more discharge from the wound, but conditions of the injury are satisfactory. We have issued strict orders for absolute quiet.
>
> Arrangements have been made to send him home, believing his condition warrants it at this time, although it will be necessary for him to be under surgical care for the next ten days.
>
> It would be a kindness if his friends and the public would assist in allowing him absolute rest and quiet for the next week or ten days.
> Dr. ARTHUR DEAN BEVAN,
> Dr. ALEXANDER LAMBERT,
> Dr. SCURRY L. TERRELL.

> Col. Roosevelt's general condition good. Respiratory movements comfortable. His general condition justifies his leaving the hospital for Oyster Bay, but it is deemed advisable in order to lessen the possibility of complications that he should not be disturbed in any way, and he will not be allowed to see any one en route. He will be in charge of Dr. Alexander Lambert and Dr. Scurry L. Terrell.
>
> ALEXANDER LAMBERT,
> SCURRY L. TERRELL.

The advisability of permitting Col. Roosevelt to make the journey was debated at length to-day by the physicians, and not decided definitely until to-night. Mrs. Roosevelt accepted their judgment, although for a time after her husband's setback last night she was doubtful whether it would be safe to attempt the journey so soon. She said this afternoon, however, that if final arrangements for the trip had been made she would not insist upon a change of plans.

Wound Bleeds, Not Dangerously.

Although Col. Roosevelt's condition was described as normal throughout the day, it was learned that his wound had bled considerably, and that he was suffering from nervous exhaustion. His physicians insisted that both of these developments were to have been expected, and that there was in them no cause for alarm.

The bleeding, it was explained by Dr. Alexander Lambert, necessarily accompanied the discharge of serum, which is part of the healing process. Dr. Lambert also said that any patient who should be in bed for a week would suffer from nervous exhaustion, and that Col. Roosevelt needed only to have absolute rest.

"I wish you would emphasize the fact," said Dr. Lambert, "that Col. Roosevelt is getting on well, but that any patient who has been in bed as long as he will suffer from some degree of nervous exhaustion. If Col. Roosevelt is kept perfectly quiet it will be safe for him to take the trip."

"There is no cause for serious misgivings," said Dr. Arthur D. Bevan, "if Col. Roosevelt is kept quiet."

Drs. Murphy and Terrell indorsed these views.

"The discharge of blood mingled with the serum was from the entire infiltrated tract," explained Dr. W. B. McCauley. "In such a case as this white corpuscles of the blood are deposited over the surface of the wound to form a protective wall. When the inflammation subsides permanent tissues begin to grow to fill up the wound. The white corpuscles dissolve and are discharged as serum."

The position of the bullet which almost cost Col. Roosevelt his life, was fixed with precision for the first time to-day. Another X-ray photograph, the third, was taken, and from this it was learned that the bullet lay on the outside of the broken rib. Until then the physicians had been unable to state positively where it was.

"We know definitely now that the bullet lies outside the rib, where it can do no harm," said Dr. Lambert. "It lies in such a position that I could reach the spot precisely through a small incision should Col. Roosevelt desire to have it removed at any time. It is a matter of his own preference."

Col. Roosevelt said he did not think he would ever have the bullet removed.

Insists on a New York Speech.

Mrs. Roosevelt supervised final arrangements for her husband's journey to Oyster Bay, and gave orders to have his car stocked with his favorite things to eat. Dr. Lambert and Dr. Terrell, who are to have charge of the Colonel during the trip, said that they would try to keep him in bed most of the time. On arrival in New York the two cars which will be occupied by Col. Roosevelt and his party will be switched to the tracks of the Long Island Railroad and sent direct to Oyster Bay, so that the Colonel will not be obliged to leave his stateroom until he gets into the automobile which will take him to Sagamore Hill.

Once back at home there will be little relaxation in the strict régime of the physicians for a week or ten days. Col. Roosevelt believes, however, that he will be able to speak in Madison Square Garden, New York, on Oct. 30. He hopes to make one speech to summarize all of his reasons for seeking support for the Progressive Party, and has begun to plan an address which he can deliver in twenty minutes.

"But I am going to the meeting anyway," he said, "even if I can speak only three words."

Elaborate Police Arrangements.

Special precautions for the protection of Col. Roosevelt when he leaves the hospital to-morrow morning were announced by Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler to-night. He will take personal charge of the arrangements, and will have thirty-five uniformed policemen who will guard Col. Roosevelt en route from the hospital to the railway station. A force of detectives will guard the patient until the train passes the Indiana State line.

At 7:30 o'clock a big limousine automobile will draw up in the courtyard of the hospital, surrounded by mounted and motor cycle policemen. The block will be cleared of people, and policemen will be on the low roofs of adjoining buildings.

Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel, and Theodore, Jr., and Mrs. Longworth will occupy the Colonel's car. Dr. Alexander Lambert and Dr. Scurry L. Terrell, the Colonel's physicians, will be quartered with the newspaper men. A bell cord will be arranged so that the patient can summon either physician at any time. The doctors, Mrs. Roosevelt, and the Colonel's daughters will be the nurses.

Sees Dr. Murphy's Family.

Col. Roosevelt had intended to confer to-day with Gov. Johnson and others on political matters, but was told decidedly that unless he obeyed the order for absolute rest the physicians would not consent to his removal to-morrow. He finally said he would agree to the rigid discipline providing Dr. Murphy would permit the latter's family to visit him. Mrs. Murphy and her daughters, the Misses Cecille, Celeste, and Mildred, had called on a former day and had missed seeing him. When he heard of it he asked Mrs. Roosevelt to ask them to call again. They did so, and saw the patient for a few moments. There was much laughter while they were in the room.

"I am confused," Col. Roosevelt told the visitors when they appeared. "I scarcely know which one to address as Mrs. Murphy, and I am bereft of my opportunity to make the pretty address I had planned to make to the most handsome of Dr. Murphy's girls. You may consider that I addressed myself to all of you in as complimentary a manner as I could."

Later, while attendants were wheeling Col. Roosevelt down the corridor to the X-ray room, Mrs. Murphy met him.

"Good-bye, Miss Murphy," he called out, emphasizing the Miss.

J. P. Hayes, a locomotive engineer, who had driven Col. Roosevelt on several trips through Montana, came from Detroit to greet him, only to learn that an embargo had been placed on visitors. He was rewarded, however, for when Col. Roosevelt was being wheeled to the X-ray room he turned and recognized the driver.

"Hello, Jack," he said. "Sorry I can't shake hands with you; my arm isn't working very well, you know."

Otherwise he was not permitted to see even the members of his family, except Mrs. Roosevelt and the omnipresent Ethel, who stayed in his room, smiling, fresh, and good to look at, when she was not warding off indignant politicians, who could not see why they had not a right to invade the Colonel's room. Miss Blanche Welter, the day nurse, came to the Colonel's suite every few minutes with a card or a letter, but Miss Ethel or the determined Mrs. Roosevelt was on guard every time.

Touched by a Boy's Letter.

There was one letter, though, that the Colonel insisted on answering. It came from a ten-year-old boy, who has been peddling flowers on Wabash Avenue, and read as follows:

> Dear Mr Roosevelt: I hope you are getting on nicely, for I want you to be our President. If I was a man I would help you and work hard for you, and tell the people how good you are, but I am only ten years old. I am sending you some money that I made selling flowers to help you, and I want you to keep it. I pray every night that you will stand up well, and I know that God is helping you. My brother, he is five. He prays, too. Yours truly,
> VINCENT AUSTIN BALDWIN,
> 1.720 Estes Avenue.

> Mercy Hospital, Sunday, Oct. 20, 1912.
> My Dear Little Vincent: Your very nice letter and gift has touched me deeply. Especially so as it represents so much. I sincerely hope that you and your little brother will grow up to be good, true men, for that is what this country needs the most. My wound is healing rapidly, and we hope that within a week or so everything may be all right. I don't know when a letter has cheered me so much as yours. With love to yourself and little brother, I am faithfully yours, THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Col. Roosevelt prepared to go to sleep to-night at 10:15, nearly an hour earlier than usual, saying that he must get a long rest to prepare for the journey to New York to-morrow. He said that he was tired, but that he expected to stand the journey well, and that he was eager to be at home.

The Colonel shook hands with thirty-five of the Sisters of Mercy who conduct the hospital to-night after he had eaten his dinner. He had expressed a desire to bid farewell to the sisters. He did not make any attempt to talk, but simply pressed the hands of each as they came to his bedside. They passed in and out of the room in silence, as they had made their acceptance of his invitation conditional on his making no exertion.

His temperature at 9 o'clock was 98.2. At 10:15 it had dropped two-tenths of a degree, to 98, which is six-tenths subnormal. His pulse and respiration were stationary at 78 and 18.

Night Nurse Margaret Fitzgerald and Miss Blanche Welter, day nurse, prepared to stay up all night to watch over the Colonel and prepare his breakfast in the morning

SCHRANK ABSOLVES PRESS.

Not Influenced to Shoot Roosevelt by Articles He Read.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 20.—Denial that certain New York newspapers influenced him to attempt the life of Col. Roosevelt is contained in the text of an examination of John Schrank by the District Attorney, which was made public to-day. Schrank says he alone developed the idea of killing the Colonel. The examination in part follows:

Q.—While you were living in New York what newspapers did you read? A.—I read The New York Herald and I read The New York World and New York Staats-Zeitung, a German paper.

Q.—Did anything you read in these papers impress you in any way? A.—Well, it did in a way impress me. That means, I thought whatever I read in the paper was pretty much right; what the people were talking about this building of the new party and deserting the old party. You can read that in the newspapers, and that is what I read, and it must be right.

Q.—Did you read these papers for the political items that were contained in them? A.—Well, in fact not exactly for that. I read the papers the same as anybody does, and naturally things like those I took an interest in every day, and the items interest me in those articles.

Q.—What headlines are still fresh in your recollection which you read concerning politics? A.—Oh, I could not just recall anything. Head lines doesn't amount to much. It is now and then, perhaps, but it doesn't amount to much. It is just the item itself.

Q.—Was there anything you read in these papers that gave you any distinct impression to kill Roosevelt? A.—No, Sir, not at all. I cannot blame the papers whatsoever. I have done what I done on my own convictions.

Q.—Well, were you not impressed by what you read in the New York papers as to the menace which Mr. Roosevelt would be to our Nation? A.—No, Sir; not by the papers, hardly. I thought my own opinion about that.

Schrank did not leave his cell to-day, but occupied most of his time writing and reading.

Most of the ministers of this city to-day took the attempted assassination of Col. Roosevelt as the subject of their sermons. They deplored the occurrence in Milwaukee, and demanded the early trial of the offender.

COLOMBIAN SEEKS COLONEL.

Alleged Diplomat Wants to Talk of Panama Seizure.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—An attempt to see Col. Roosevelt was made at Mercy Hospital shortly before midnight by Luis E. Molina, who gave his address as Bogota, Colombia, and said that he was a secret diplomatic representative of the Colombian Government. He was stopped by detectives and city policemen who were on duty.

Molina said that his father was a Senator of Colombia. He sent Col. Roosevelt a postal card and wrote him a long letter containing accusations that the Colonel had committed an "atrocious crime" in taking Panama from Colombia and bidding him beware of the vengeance of God.

Molina was accompanied by two Mexicans, who gave their names as B. Carello and Esteban Moran. They said they had known Molina but a few hours.

Molina declared he would go to New York on the same train with the Colonel and would see him there, or would follow him to Oyster Bay. He exhibited a ticket over the Pennsylvania Railroad to New York that would entitle him to travel on the train taken by the Colonel. He also displayed a large roll of bills. The detectives after questioning Molina permitted him to depart.

Colonel Roosevelt knew nothing of the attempt to see him. Molina sent a box of flowers to the Colonel and followed it with a note written on a post card. It read:

> Col. Roosevelt: I sincerely desire your complete recovery. Now that you are lying on a bed of pain, remember Almighty God and how easy it is to disappear from the earth. After this remember your greatest offense in your official career—the robbery of Panama from Colombia. Try to remedy this iniquity and God will protect you.

The detectives said Molina was not armed. He said he came from New Orleans especially to see the Colonel as soon as he heard of the shooting. He said he followed him in the West during his last speaking tour from Texas to California.

His letter to the Colonel follows:

"I have hurried from New Orleans on the expectation of being able to express to you personally my sympathy in your misfortune. This privilege, however, has been denied me. Nevertheless, I would like to convey to you the sentiment of the noblest people in South America and to inform you, Colonel, that a time has come for your meditation on the blackest spot in the history of your life.

"Remember, Mr. Roosevelt, that although you have been a great world citizen, your entry into civilization from Africa and the homages you received from the world were marred by the refusal of the Vicar of Christ at Rome to see you. This material demonstration of a divine will to humble your pride will serve to call to your mind the fact that although you might have been proclaimed in a hypocritical way the greatest man since the time of Napoleon, your star has been descending and will continue to descend until you clear your conscience of the most atrocious and wicked act you ever committed in your life.

"We Colombians hope to see you elected for a third-term President of the United States. You injured us supremely, but we trust in God and He will certainly touch your heart and compel you by moral force to return to us what belongs to us, to restore the sovereignty of Colombia over Panama, our rebel State.

"God help you, Mr. Roosevelt, to recover fully. I have come expressly from New Orleans to speak to you personally, but this opportunity has been denied me. I will see you, however, at New York."

PREACHES AGAINST SCHRANK.

Should Have Been Kept Out of This Country, Says the Rev. F. O. Hall.

The Rev. Frank O. Hall, pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street, preached yesterday on the shooting of Col. Roosevelt. Mr. Hall said:

"Having been born, John Schrank of all others should not have been neglected in his childhood, and should not have been educated in that school for crime, the saloon, and, further, having been born in another country, he should not have been permitted to come here to become a part of the burden of vice and crime which we must carry.

"I do not wish to sit in judgment on John Schrank, but let us consider his case. In the first place, he was not American born, but an importation. We must shut our doors tight against the criminal immigrant. We are told that we can assimilate, but we must not forget that there is a limit to the capacity to assimilate. In 1905 there were 23,000,000 people in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey, and one-half of the voters in those States were born elsewhere than America. Statisticians tell us that 22,000,000 more will settle in these States in the next twenty-five years, and that 90 per cent. of these newcomers will be unable to read, write, or speak a single work of English. It is from this constituency that a very large proportion of our lawless population is and will be drawn.

"His was a typical case of neglected childhood, and he has done what might reasonably have been expected of him. Now we say 'Crush him.' How foolish of us to allow a child to grow up in neglect and in evil environment, and then to have no better remedy than to crush him. There are 100,000 children in this city today on part time in school because you and I and the rest of the community cannot afford to furnish them with schoolhouses and teachers. Later on we or some one must furnish them with jails and insane asylums and poorhouses."

The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, from his pulpit at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, discussed at considerable length last night the attempted assassination of Col. Roosevelt. He classed his assailant as a degenerate, and inquired into the causes that produced such creatures. He blamed the laxity of our immigration laws as the chief cause, and he spoke of other causes.

"The fact is," he said, "we produce in this country degenerates in enormous numbers. They are free to go and come as they choose. That is to say, the lowest, the worst, and the weakest come into contact with the highest, the best, and the strongest, and destroy them. You cannot cure or avoid degenerates by bodyguards or laws. We do not want more laws, but more observance of laws. Every one must at all cost cultivate a true ideal of life, right standard of morals, and a true religious experience."

JOHNSON WILL MAKE FIGHT IN THE EAST

WILL NOT LOSE HIS OFFICE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Gov. Hiram W. Johnson is to take Col. Roosevelt's place in the final Progressive campaign in the East. He will not lose the Governorship of California, either, although he will be absent from that State more than sixty days and there is a statute forbidding such absence, on pain of losing office.

Gov. Johnson was quite ready to make the sacrifice, and insisted on it in his warm argument with Col. Roosevelt at Mercy Hospital yesterday. He learned afterward from Attorney General Webb of California, however, that the Legislature at the last session had passed a resolution permitting certain officers to be absent more than the sixty days, and that he had been included in it. He was pleased when he started for New York to-day to know that his office and power in California were safe, but his chief joy was that Col. Roosevelt need not be worried over the matter.

An account of the argument in the hospital yesterday shows how ready the Governor was to give up his office. For once the indomitable Colonel met a spirit as stiff as his own.

"I don't care what you say," said Gov. Johnson. "My job as Governor is nothing to me as compared with the principles we are fighting for. Your retirement makes it necessary for the second in command to take up the fight in the East. I'm second in command, and I'm going to take it up, job or no job."

"But you owe a duty to the people of California," protested the Colonel. This was at the end of the argument, and the Colonel was springing his last trump.

"I do," retorted Gov. Johnson, "but not half as big a duty as I owe to you and to the Progressive Party."

That settled it, and Gov. Johnson went out determined to handle the Bull Moose campaign in the East without regard to what might happen to the Governorship.

Gov. Johnson, however, felt that he owed something to his supporters in California. Aside from the question of the loss of the Governorship was the one of the critical situation in that State. Because of the failure of the Taft Presidential Electors to get on the official ballot, thousands of Republicans intend to vote for Gov. Wilson, and it is now exceedingly doubtful whether the Progressives can win. Hundreds of telegrams have been sent to Gov. Johnson urging the necessity of going home to save the State. In consequence he issued a statement to-day to the California voters asking indulgence for him in the emergency. The statement reads:

> Sunday, Oct. 20, 1912.
> To the people of the State of California:
> My campaign in the East was concluded last night in Chicago, and my preparations had been made for departure to-day, to arrive in our State Wednesday next. I had expected to devote the remainder of the time before election to California. The attempted assasination of Col. Roosevelt has completely altered all of our plans, and, as the Vice Presidential candidate of the Progressive Party, I have been asked so far as I am able to take up the burden that Col. Roosevelt was so ably and so bravely bearing, and to continue the campaign until its close as had been contemplated by him.
> I had felt that it was my duty to return to my native State, and I was very loath to remain longer absent; but my enlistment in this cause for which we strive was not for a day but for all time, and when the leader of the cause was stricken and I found him helpless here, it seemed to have fallen to me to bear part of his burden, and to continue the struggle as we had planned for him to do. Reluctantly, therefore, for there are many reasons for my return that may be readily understood, I have yielded to the request of the Progressives of the Nation and shall, in so far as I am able, continue this great battle that means so much for our humanity.
>
> The cause for which we strive—popular rule and social and industrial justice—is so well understood in California that I feel it may be safely left to those who have made and won the fight there. In the wider field of the Nation the part has been mine, in the last sixty days, to preach our California doctrines, and in the remaining two weeks, the most critical period of the struggle, it has fallen to me to continue that work with added responsibility. I feel that the situation will be thoroughly appreciated by all of these in our great State of achievement who have been in sympathy with the work we have there done, and that they will gladly acquiesce in the necessity which compels me to remain absent until Election Day.
> HIRAM W. JOHNSON.

Because of the strict orders given by Col. Roosevelt's doctors the candidates did not have another conference to-day. Gov. Johnson left here this afternoon at 2:45 o'clock over the Pennsylvania lines for New York, where he will complete arrangements to fill Col. Roosevelt's speaking dates in the East during the remainder of the campaign, and to direct the fight. The complete itinerary has not been given out, but it will embrace the States of New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Maine, New Jersey, Delaware, and Pennsylvania. Gov. Johnson expects to spend at least one day in Maine and another in Massachusetts. He will travel by special train.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—A search of the records of the last California Legislature shows that Gov. Johnson is perfectly safe in remaining away from California beyond the sixty days provided in the statutes. It seems that a resolution was passed giving the members leave to absent themselves from the State longer than sixty days, and it included Gov. Johnson. This assembly resolution has not been printed, but it is on the files in Sacramento, although Gov. Johnson's name appears in a handwriting different from that of the original. The Chronicle's Legislative correspondent distinctly remembers the passage of the resolution.

Milton L. Schmitt, member of the Assembly, said to-day: "It was a resolution introduced by me, strange as that may seem, that gave to Gov. Johnson an indefinite leave of absence. I had drafted a resolution toward the end of the session providing for leave of absence for each member of the Assembly, and by request, I wrote in the name of Hiram Johnson. The resolution went through in that form."

HEAVY WORK FOR JOHNSON.

Governor Will Cover the Eastern States in a Whirlwind Tour.

A complete change in the Eastern campaign plans of Col. Roosevelt and Gov. Hiram W. Johnson of California, the Colonel's running mate on the Bull Moose Presidential ticket, was announced yesterday at the Bull Moose headquarters here as a result of Mr. Roosevelt's physical condition. For one thing, Gov. Johnson is going to take up the campaign work in the East that was laid out for Col. Roosevelt. He will be in New York to-day, and will immediately begin an extended itinerary in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and other Eastern States, covering the territory as far as feasible in which Col. Roosevelt would have spoken.

As for Col. Roosevelt, the big mass meeting arranged to take place in Madison Square Garden on Oct. 25, at which the Colonel was to speak, has been postponed until Wednesday evening, Oct. 30. The change was made at the request of the Colonel, and in his announcement of the change State Chairman William H. Hotchkiss said:

"This action was taken so that the Colonel might have four additional days in which to recover from the effects of his wound. His speech that evening will be the most important in the present campaign. All tickets which have been issued for the meeting on the 25th will be honored on the 30th."

Regarding Gov. Johnson's change of plans, Senator Joseph M. Dixon said:

"Gov. Johnson is going to take up the campaign work in the East that had been laid out for Col. Roosevelt and that was interrupted by the attempt on Col. Roosevelt's life in Milwaukee. This involves a complete change in Gov. Johnson's plans. He had been campaigning in the East, and the time had arrived when he had completed that campaign and was about to depart for the State of California, where the remaining period would be spent by him in his own territory. The attempted assassination of Col. Roosevelt has changed all campaign plans. As Gov. Johnson is the Progressive Vice Presidential candidate, and as Col. Roosevelt spoke of him at the Progressive National Convention as 'fit at the moment to become President,' naturally he was at once requested to take up the burden of the campaign, and although at variance with his original plan and with those of his friends and colleagues in California, nevertheless, as in the instance of his candidacy for Vice President, he was again drafted and is to go forward and perform the work until election day.

TOO KIND TO CONVICTS.

Inventor Released from Auburn Compliments Officials—His Airships.

Special to The New York Times.

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 20.—"The officials are polite and too good to the convicts," declared William Knobloch of New York, released from Auburn prison yesterday after serving two years for grand larceny. He said many complimentary things about the officials, but was not so complimentary toward the inmates.

"The food in prison," he said, "is far too good. The men waste food and destroy property in the shops, and the officers are unable to check it. The treatment of the men is altogether too good; they don't deserve it. And they have too many privileges. The books allowed them are too much on the dime novel order. Convicts should be limited to technical works and books that uplift them. Out of eight men who go out I noticed that six men will come back. Crime is crime, and not a disease. The men do not want to work, and the public has to pay for it."

Knobloch is a man of considerable technical training. His chief possession on leaving prison was a model of an airship that he has been perfecting. Two years ago his arrest for a technical violation of the law in a business transaction interrupted his work on an airship. In prison he has worked out his theories, and his model is interesting. He plans to raise his airship by means of compressed air shot from tubes against small areas of the air, as in the case of rockets. Aloft a gas bag will be the buoyant force, and his motive power will control the direction of his airship.

TO EXPEDITE ETTOR TRIAL.

Prosecution Will Probably Rest Before End of Week—Jury Has Outing.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 20.—District Attorney Attwill plans this week to rush the prosecution of Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso. When court reconvenes to-morrow, after two days' recess, the witnesses for the Commonwealth will be disposed of as rapidly as possible. More testimony will be presented by officers of the City of Lawrence, mill employes, and officials, and others who had to deal with the disturbances attendant upon the industrial warfare which prevailed in the mill city last Winter.

Thus far in the trial no testimony has been presented relating to the actual killing of Anna Lopizzo, the efforts of the Commonwealth having been directed toward establishing proof that the defendants, Ettor and Giovannitti, aroused the strikers to disorders, during which she lost her life. Caruso, who is charged with being a principal in the actual killing, is also held by the Commonwealth as an accessory, the claim being that he stabbed Policeman Benoit during the outbreak in which the woman was killed.

The defense plans a vigorous assault upon the testimony of the prosecution, which will probably be closed this week. The defendants' attorneys say that they have documentary evidence tending to show that Ettor and Giovannitti counseled against violence, and that they sought to prevent disturbances and bloodshed.

The jury in the case had an outing on Saturday under the escort of officers of the court.

VANISHES FROM SOUND BOAT.

W. E. Glaessel Believed to Have Committed Suicide.

After the steamboat Richard Peck of the New Haven Line had tied up at the foot of Catharine Street early yesterday morning and discharged its passengers, O. W. Swenson, the steward, discovered in one of the staterooms the clothing and property of a man believed to have been W. E. Glaessel, employed at 292 Taaffe Street, Brooklyn. The missing man is thought to have leaped from the boat on the trip down from New Haven.

The steward promptly notified Policeman Kale on fixed post at Catharine Slip, who took the belongings, consisting of a locked suitcase, sweater, cap, and other clothing to the Oak Street Station. In them the police found $20 in cash, a check book of the Century Bank at Twentieth Street and Fifth Avenue, business memoranda, one of them on the billhead of the G. & S. Petticoat Company; a revolver, and an unbroken package of cartridges. They also discovered a note addressed "Creditors" and reading:

"None of them new what they were doing. I fooled them to it."

Two other letters were marked "Father" and "Mother," but in no case was any street address given.

EAST SIDERS PRAY FOR COL. ROOSEVELT

ALL PARTIES REPRESENTED

Rivington Street was thrown into much excitement last night by the eagerness of men, women and children to get near the doors of the First Roumanian-American Temple. The street for blocks was thronged by 7 o'clock last evening and those near the temple pleaded with the sexton to open the doors so that they could enter and pray for Col. Roosevelt's recovery.

It had been noised about through the lower east side on Saturday afternoon that a general prayer service would be conducted last night in the temple, which houses the largest congregation on the east side, for Col. Roosevelt. Signs put on the doors of the edifice late Saturday evening confirmed the report, and three thousand persons were on hand an hour before the time set for the service to begin.

So restless had the crowd become by 7 o'clock last evening that all the policemen in the neighborhood were sent to keep the crowd from the temple steps and to prevent the sidewalk from being blocked. When the doors opened policemen served as doorkeepers, striving to make the crowd enter in an orderly way and without endangering the women and children. In twenty minutes the 2,000 seats in the temple were taken and the front doors were locked from the inside. Policemen stood on guard on the outside.

The police then allowed groups of ten persons at a time to enter and find standing room in the aisles and balcony. Inside the congregation was banked against every wall and crowded every aisle to unlawful extremes. Many women had babies in their arms, which they strove to quiet as the Cantor, the Rev. Joseph Jacobson, in a fine tenor voice, and accompanied by a well-trained boy choir, sang the invocation to prayer.

Just in front of the Cantor's seat a special platform for the speakers of the evening had been erected. Those who were to take part in the service included Municipal Justices Leon Sanders and Leonard A. Snitkin, Dr. Henry Moscowitz, Sheriff Julius Harburger, Nathan Rosenzweig, and Assemblyman Meyer Greenberg. Louis Diamant presided.

Mr. Rosenzweig, a prominent member of the congregation, spoke in German. He declared that the service was intended as a strictly religious praise and prayer service in honor of an ex-President who had nearly lost his life at the hands of an assassin. He wanted to impress on all present, he said, that the service should be kept entirely free from politics; that political utterances were absolutely barred, and that men of different political beliefs were simply meeting together to offer thanks to God for the deliverance of a man who was universally beloved on the east side. He led the congregation in the first prayer of the evening.

At the conclusion of the prayer a little street urchin with golden hair and a face streaked with dirt, walked boldly up to the speakers' rostrum. He wore no coat and his blue blouse was torn to tatters. His short trousers were also much the worse for wear, and for a belt he wore a harness strap. On his head was a black skull cap. He presented a strange contrast to most of those in the temple. He had almost reached the Cantor's chair when a man took him by the arm and led him into one of the side aisles.

After this Mr. Diamant spoke. He told in English of the shooting of Col. Roosevelt. At the first mention of the Colonel's name there were cheers, but these were quickly silenced by those in authority.

"We of this congregation," said Mr. Diamant, "with our 2,000 communicants and representing thousands and hundreds of thousands on this east side, knowing of the sturdiness and good work of Theodore Roosevelt, offer our thanks to God to-night for his miraculous escape and earnestly pray for his speedy recovery.

"The fact that Col. Roosevelt was actively connected with a campaign has absolutely nothing to do with our service. We recognize only that Theodore Roosevelt is a champion of humanity, fighting for humanity, which is the broadest religion of them all, and therefore we assemble here to-night to give our voice to the sentiments of all the good men and women in this part of town, and pray for Theodore Roosevelt so that he may get well and continue to fight on behalf of humanity."

Then Dr. Moscowitz, who is running for Congress on the east side on the Bull Moose ticket, was introduced. He said:

"We love this man Roosevelt. We love him because he knows us. He knows what we suffered before we came to this country, and he knows what the Jew can do for the future development of this country."

Col. Roosevelt was lauded in resolutions adopted by the gathering as "a sincere and earnest champion of human rights and a friend of man, irrespective of race, creed, or color." The choir chanted the Thirtieth Psalm and then intoned a special prayer for the ex-President.

Sheriff Harburger and Judge Snitkin then expressed sympathy for Col. Roosevelt, and said they were proud to do so in spite of the fact that they differed from him in politics. Sheriff Harburger bitterly denounced all forms of anarchy and made it plain that he would never sanction meetings of Anarchists in his territory so long as he was Sheriff of the county.

"As Sheriff of this county," he declared, "I protest against the action of dynamiters, assassins, and Anarchists. I am in favor of preventing any persons who are of anarchistic faith from meeting in this city. I want no one in my territory who will preach such doctrines as will lead to such murderous assaults as we have recently heard about. I am in favor of a law providing death for all who even attempt to assassinate our Presidents and ex-Presidents. I will see to it, I declare, that there shall be no un-American demonstrations in my bailiwick."

Judge Snitkin uttered a warning against the destruction of liberty at the hands of assassins. "Although I disagree with the politics of Theodore Roosevelt," he said, "I have come here to pray to our God for the speedy recovery of our ex-President. I came here as a Jew to proclaim that Jews, while a liberty loving people, believe in law and order and object to anarchistic acts. The way to decide things in this country is by the ballot and not by the bullet. We pray that our God will give Col. Roosevelt strength to carry out his work as he sees fit. I wish to add my word of admiration to Theodore Roosevelt, the man. I pray for his speedy recovery."

After the concluding prayer the congregation filed out and quickly dispersed.

Let Us Go In to Dinner

¶ Evening — a time for wit, white shirts, women, wine and wooing.

¶ A time for dinner and the inconsequential chatter that goes with it.

¶ There is a serenity of mind to be acquired in a dinner coat which few other consolations are so competent to provide.

¶ And there is a note of distinction about a Saks dinner coat — a certain unmistakable elegance of cut, tailoring and finish, which is the very dinner-gong of style.

¶ To the man who wants a Tuxedo which is perfect in fit, and which in a congregation of dinner coats will be distinguishable from the rest for its style, we commend the new Saks Tuxedo, with link or regulation buttons, slightly-shaped waist, and satin-faced collar and lapels.

¶ It is a garment which seems somehow to express in its lines the era of relief which evening ushers in, the light and laughter, and the gay inconsequence of dinner-time.

HUNGARIAN BANK TERMED UNPATRIOTIC

WANTS THE STATE TO ACT

Hungary Said to Back the Bank—Reorganized as Trans-Atlantic Trust Co.—New York Men in It.

Marcus Braun, President of the Hungarian Republican Club, has petitioned the Attorney General in an attempt to stop the Trans-Atlantic Trust Company from doing business. His objections are not to the financial standing of the institution, which was organized last Spring as a successor to the Hungarian-American Bank and numbers among its Directors representatives of some of the important banks and international banking houses of the financial district, but to its alleged influence in preventing Hungarian immigrants from giving up their allegiance to the old country and becoming American citizens.

The Trans-Atlantic Trust Company is the outgrowth of a desire of some of the leading banks of Austro-Hungary to establish American connections. Long preliminary negotiations resulted in the establishment in 1907 of the Hungarian-American Bank. This institution never flourished, although its financial backing was ample, the shares being largely held by the Hungarian General Credit Bank and the Hungarian Commercial Bank of Budapest. The admitted purpose of the bank was to attract the deposits of the large colony of thrifty Hungarians in this city, who were heavy transmitters of funds to the institutions in the home country, and make use of this money in the New York banking field.

It was said at the time that the Hungarian immigrants, ignorant and distrustful of American banking institutions here, preferred to go to the expense of sending their savings to the Government-fostered savings banks of the old country. This bank lacked experienced Directors, and it was largely to strengthen it in this particular that Baron Paul Kornfeld and Otto Conrad, representing the two Hungarian institutions, came to New York last December, and eventually put through the organization of the Transatlantic Trust Company, with $700,000 capital and $350,000 surplus. Its new board included a strong list of New Yorkers.

A hearing on Braun's petition, which was filed in Albany on July 1, will take place to-morrow before Joseph A. Kellogg, Deputy State Attorney General, in his offices at 299 Broadway. Braun calls the interest of the foreign bankers in the New York institution "a conspiracy to undermine on the part of the functionaries of the Hungarian Government some of the most cherished institutional functions of America."

He alleges that the trust company is backed by the Hungarian Government and that it seeks to discourage Hungarian immigrants from becoming citizens and remaining here. It is alleged that it fosters societies whose purpose is to keep alive love of the homeland and to distribute literature for that purpose. It is also alleged that through the trust company an arrangement can be made whereby the Hungarian who comes here to get work can buy land in his own country and ultimately return, and that, among other things, there is an advisory directorate for the bank abroad, and Braun believes a majority of the Directors here do not know all the purposes of the institution.

The New York interests in the directorate of the trust company include H. Rieman Duval, Chairman, President of the American Beet Sugar Company; James G. Cannon, President of the Fourth National Bank; John W. Platten, President of the United States Mortgage & Trust; Stuyvesant Fish, Calvert Brewer, Vice President of the United States Mortgage & Trust; Walther Luttgen of August Belmont & Co., Henry W. Wherhane of Hallgarten & Co.; Clark Williams, former State Superintendent of Banks and former State Controller; Walter G. Oakman; Alexander von Nuber, Consul General for Austria-Hungary, and Hans Winterfelt of Speyer & Co. Julius Pirnitzer is President of the company.

Benjamin S. Harmon of Krauthof, Harmon & Mathewson, counsel for the Trust Company, said last night that the petition did not amount to anything, but that he could not discuss the action over the telephone.

NEW CONSUL TO BULGARIA.

R. B. Strassburger, Navy Football Hero, Appointed to the Post.

Ralph B. Strassburger, a former Annapolis football player, has been appointed by President Taft as Secretary of the Legation and Consul General to Roumania, Bulgaria, and Servia. He will sail from this city on Wednesday on the Mauretania for the headquarters of his new post at Bucharest, which has suddenly become of special importance in view of the Balkan war and the present complicated political situation in the Balkan States.

Mr. Strassburger is unusually young for so important a post. He was born in Norristown, Penn., in 1883, a son of J. A. Strassburger, former District Attorney of Montgomery County. He was graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1905, and after serving for several years in the navy, entered the boiler-testing department of the Babcock & Wilcox Company of this city. In the Fall of 1909, while the battleship North Dakota was on her trial trip, a boiler tube exploded, killing three men and wounding sixteen; and it was only through the quick action of Mr. Strassburger that more were not killed. He was promoted rapidly thereafter, and when he resigned he was assistant to Vice President Hoxie of the company.

At Annapolis Mr. Strassburger is best remembered for his prowess as a football player. He brought about the navy victory over the army in the sensational game of 1903. In 1911 he married Miss May Bourne of Long Island, the daughter of Frederick G. Bourne. Mrs. Strassburger insists on accompanying her husband to his new post in the Balkans.

ELIOT BLAMES SCHOOLS.

Former Harvard Head Says They Are Partly Responsible for Strikes.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, in an analysis of industrial conditions in this country, finds that part of the blame of industrial wars is to be laid to the common schools in failing to assimilate the foreigners pouring into our industrial life.

"The industrial wars which so seriously diminish the productiveness and prosperity of the country," he declared in an interview to-day, "are evidences that the common schools have not grappled successfully with the tremendous problem put before them.

"Education has a large bearing on labor disturbances. The whole eastern part of the country has been forcibly reminded of the stupidity, wastefulness, and ineffectiveness of strikes, considered as remedies for social and industrial wrongs. It should be observed, however, concerning this disappointment, that it results in a large measure from a difficulty which accounts for a good many troubles in the United States, namely, the difficulty of assimilating, year after year, large numbers of foreigners.

"The managers, leaders, and promoters of strikes are frequently foreigners or persons whose parents came to this country from Europe, and a large proportion of the men who engage in them are of foreign birth. To be sure, it is only a small fraction of the United States which is organized in labor unions. But this small fraction is active and possesses in combat the usual advantages which result from compact organization.

"This condition of affairs I ascribe to the fact that the schools have not in times past effectively handled this population, for we permit a group of people who do not speak our tongue and who do not know our customs to make themselves an indispensable part of our productive machinery."

umn is pushing forward near Kirjali. Another column has cleared the tongue of Turkish territory immediately south of Philippopolis. A third column is reported to be near Djumabala, on the road which threatens the railway between Saloniki and Constantinople.

It is stated that the notorious guerrilla, Sandansky, with 20,000 armed Bulgarian peasants, is moving to cut this line near Salonika, but he is likely to find it strongly guarded.

The Servians also are on the march, menacing Uskub from two directions. They are moving two columns, said to be at least 150,000 strong. One column is proceeding down the railway from Vranje and the second along the mountain road from Kostendil in Bulgaria. This latter column has cleared the defile which debouches into Turkish territory through the Osigova Mountains.

The latest news of the Servian Army comes in a Sofia dispatch to the effect that it has captured Egri-Palanka and Kumanova, which may be regarded as the key to Uskub.

The Montenegrins have scored another minor success in the capture of the mountain village of Gusinje, thirty-five miles northeast of Scutari. This opens up the mountain track, whereby the Montenegrins can move to the rear of the Turkish garrison and isolate Scutari.

Five divisions of the Greek Army, with the Crown Prince in supreme command, are now operating in Turkish territory. The Greeks have pressed forward some twenty miles without hard fighting, seizing Elassona at the foot of Mount Olympus, while a Greek force is threatening the Turkish fortress of Prevesa.

A Constantinople dispatch says that eleven Greek ships, including the cruiser Averoff, have appeared off the Island of Lemnos in the Aegean Sea.

Greeks Occupy Elassona.

ATHENS, Oct. 20.—After a four hours' engagement the Greeks yesterday dislodged the Turks from the strong positions which they had taken in the defense of Elassona, at the foot of Mount Olympus, and occupied the town.

Crown Prince Constantine was in personal command and received his baptism of fire. The Greek troops showed great courage. Their losses were small.

The Turkish troops retired toward Sarandaporo Pass, where the main forces had concentrated. The Greeks occupy all the heights to the north of Elassona, and a decisive battle is imminent.

The King will leave here some time this week to join the army in Thessaly.

SOFIA, Oct. 20.—The Bulgarian forces operating against Adrianople have driven the Turks back to the forts forming the outer line of the defenses. They have taken 100 prisoners.

The general advance of the Bulgarians continues. Several of the positions on the heights were taken at the bayonet's point.

There was an unconfirmed report that the Turks have evacuated the outer lines of fortifications around Adrianople.

Owing to the proximity of the Turkish fleet the Government has ordered that the light of the Varna Lighthouse be extinguished.

The newspapers declare that the Turkish bombardment of Varna violated international law and The Hague Convention, because the Black Sea is neutral water. They declare also that the Bulgarian Government expects the powers to intervene.

The semi-official Mir asserts that the powers are negotiating with a view to establishing the neutrality of the Black Sea.

> Impressed at I have always been with profound confidence in the Bulgarian star, I am now convinced that our incomparable and valiant army, sprung from a people like the Bulgarians, whose self-sacrifice for their national ideas is without equal in history, will fight and destroy the eternal enemy of the Bulgarian race. Our brothers from the other side of the Rilo-Dagh and Rhodope Mountains will at last receive light from the aurora of liberty. Long live the valiant and victorious Bulgarian Army! Long live the valorous Bulgarian people!

BELGRADE, Oct. 20.—The Servian army, under the command of the Crown Prince, has captured Rulya heights, a strategical position to the south of Bujanoratz, some miles below Vranya.

An official report from the General Staff at Nish, says that the Servians have taken all the trenches in the Turkish territory around Vranya, and that the Turks have been driven back across Morava Valley.

Details have been received of a treacherous act by Albanians on the Servian posts near Prepalatz, forty miles to the south of Nish. Last Thursday Albanian irregulars, who constituted an attacking party were repulsed, and hoisted a white flag. A Servian Captain with a detachment approached the irregulars, who opened fire, killing an officer and twelve men and wounding fodty. The Servian artillery immediately shelled the enemy, killing 200.

CETTINJE, Oct. 20.—It is officially announced here that the Montenegrin forces captured the town of Plava yesterday. The battle lasted two days.

Greek Warships Off Epirus.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 20.—It is reported from Yanina that six Greek warships and three transports have appeared off the coast of Epirus.

Their apparent object is the landing of troops.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 21.—An order was given yesterday to the Turkish Army in Thrace to take a vigorous offensive against Bulgaria, according to a Constantinople dispatch to The Daily Telegraph. In the meantime the Turkish fleet has been recalled from the Black Sea and ordered to pass through the Dardanelles, with further instructions to seek and attack the Greek fleet.

The Turkish warships fired 100 rounds at Varna, but without effect, says a Sofia dispatch to The Times. Two Bulgarian torpedo boats then issued from the harbor and engaged the Turkish squadron, one ship of which withdrew. It is believed that she was struck by a torpedo, but not seriously damaged. Eventually the Turks proceeded to Baltchik, twenty-five miles to the north, where they indulged in another harmless bombardment. They then returned to Varna, but kept at a respectful distance, apparently fearing mines.

At nightfall the Bulgarian torpedo boats came out again, but no engagement was reported during the night. The Turkish squadron was still at Varna yesterday, (Sunday,) but did not open fire.

Another dispatch to The Times says that a Bulgarian column from Kostendil captured Djumabala, Mahomia, and Banks o, in the Razlog district without resistance. Several villages were burned by the retreating Turks.

A Salonika dispatch dated Oct. 18 says that a battle between Turks and Servians was then in progress north of Pristina.

A dispatch from Sofia to The Daily Mail says that prior to the capture of Djumabala by the Bulgarians Col. Ghinoff committed suicide on the march because he had lost touch with the troops as they advanced.

An Athens dispatch to The Daily Telegraph says that after a preliminary artillery duel between the Greeks and 6,000 Turks at Elassona the Greek infantry charged repeatedly, and finally dislodged the Turks, capturing their seven siege guns. The Turks retired to the north.

It is estimated that 40,000 Turks are concentrated at Serva, a small town in Macedonia about twenty miles from Mount Olympus with strong artillery.

From both Constantinople and Sofia are issued constant denials of successes claimed by the respective opponents. For instance, an official statement came last night from Sofia to the effect that all the reports of Turkish invasions of Bulgarian territory were pure inventions, while on the previous day the Turkish Government took occasion to deny the report of the capture of a large number of Turkish troops by the Montenegrins at Tushi.

Greek Reverence for Olympus.

The peasants who live in the neighborhood of Mount Olympus still tell of magic palaces on the mountain and of strange virtues possessed by the mountain air. These legends date from pre-Homeric times, for even in Homer's day the abode of the gods had been transferred from the actual Olympus, the highest summit of the Thessalian mountain range of the same name, to a heavenly region free from snow and storm and filled with dazzling light.

At the same time, Olympus always retained its sacred character, and the fact that the first Greek success in the war now beginning has been gained at Olympus, the home of all that is most sacred in old Greek myth, will doubtless be acclaimed as an omen of success. Olympus, however, must not be confused with the ancient City of Olympia, the scene of the Olympic games, at the junction of the Cladeus and the Alpheus Rivers, where German archaeologists in recent years have obtained such remarkable results from the systematic excavations they have conducted—excavations which have yielded extraordinary treasures of Greek art and have made the sacred city as described by Pausanias as real now as in his day.

It was in the neighborhood of Mount Olympus that the principal struggles of the Greek-Turkish war of 1897 took place. As a result of that war Greece had to pay a large indemnity, but the intervention of the powers saved her from the loss of much territory. If she had won, doubtless the cession of the country around Olympus would have been one of the conditions imposed on Turkey.

Serbs and to contribute to the cause of my country. Gladly would I return with the brave hearts who are on their way to fight in this war, but I have my wife, my children, and my farm in Montana.

"I came to this country seven years ago. I have worked hard. My wife is a good woman and a true Servian. She has borne me four sons and she has helped me save. I have in this world $7,000, and of this sum I have brought to New York with me $5,000."

The speaker delved into the capacious pocket of his outer coat and produced a small canvas bag, which he opened to display a roll of bills of large denominations.

"I give to the Treasurer of this meeting and to the cause of the Balkan States my life savings, as I would also give my life if I were free to offer it to my country," Yovanowich said.

Immediately he was caught in a surge of the crowd, which swept upon him, shouting and clamoring its approval and delight. He was pulled and jostled hither and thither by fellow-countrymen, who strove with each other to shake his hand, to pat him on the back, or to touch his coat. Yovanowich struggled to free himself, but succeeded only after Detective Upton had gone to his assistance.

When order had been restored persons in the audience were invited to contribute and there was a general rush for the space in front of the platform. Men and women rubbed elbows in the enthusiastic line, and bills of small denomination fell thick and fast upon the table at which the Treasurer, Mr. Sargentich, was seated. It was an hour before the last man had contributed his mite toward the cause, and when the receipts were counted it was found that the meeting had netted more than $16,000.

100,000 GREEKS MAY LEAVE U. S.

More Than 8,000 Have Gone and Other Thousands Wait for Ships.

Since the call to arms was issued more than 8,000 Greeks and more than 600 Bulgarians have left this port for the seat of war. Before another week has elapsed it is estimated that fully 30,000 Greeks, resident in the United States, will have responded to the call. They have been gathering here in constantly increasing numbers from all parts of the country, and have departed for Greece as fast as they could find transportation. It is believed that if the war continues 100,000 Greeks will leave the United States to take part in it. The steamship Patris of the National Greek line is due to arrive here to-morrow, and when she sails on the 25th 2,000 Greeks will go home on her to fight the Turks.

Business men declared yesterday that if the exodus continued industries employing Greeks would be sure to suffer. Greeks are employed in large numbers in the manufacture of tobacco and confectionery and also in the iron, steel, and coal trades. Thousands of Greeks are employed in the coal mines of Utah. There are many Greek restaurants in the city which employ exclusively Greek waiters, and many Greeks work in American hotels as waiters, dishwashers, and helpers. The places in which Greeks are employed have been affected only mildly by the exodus as yet, but within another week the proprietors of these places fear they will be confronted with a serious shortage of labor.

Saks Motor Wear for Owners & Chauffeurs

¶ The quality of Saks motor apparel is proverbial. The distinctiveness of Saks motor apparel is the despair of many motor wear establishments. And the reasonableness of Saks prices is the hardest thing of all for many people to understand. But it all resolves itself into this—Saks motor wear excels in these respects simply because motor apparel is a serious business with us, and not in any sense a pastime or a side line.

2400 Men's "Velvetrib" Undergarments . . . value 1.00 today at 69c

Only mistake you can make in buying "Velvetrib" underwear is to pay a dollar a garment for it when you can buy it at sixty-nine cents.

¶ "Velvetrib" underwear is made of selected imported cotton that is almost as soft as wool, and its elasticity spells comfort with a capital C. The neck of a "Velvetrib" shirt is reinforced with silk, the front is of silk, and the buttonholes are carefully tailored. The drawers have a strap back, the waistband is finished with mercerized sateen, and the gusset is reinforced to ensure a full measure of wear. Just the weight you want for Fall and Winter wear. Neither medium nor yet heavy, but a very comfortable, satisfactory weight somewhere between the two. A big bargain at 69c. per garment.

TAFT SEES VICTORY ON PROSPERITY ISSUE

Says Many Democrats Will Vote Against Their Party to Prevent Business Upsets.

NO HOPE FOR THIRD PARTY

Democratic "Tariff for Revenue Only" Is Fraught with Dire Consequences, He Declares.

BEVERLY, Mass., Oct. 20.—President Taft issued a statement to-night predicting Republican victory next month and declaring it "obvious that either the Republican or Democratic nominee will be elected." He asserts it to be an open secret that "the third party does not expect success."

The President reviews business conditions of the country, which he says are unprecedentedly prosperous, and asserts the belief that the sober judgment of the voters will continue present conditions. The statement reads:

"Sixty-two years ago seceders from the Union thought they were facing a divided North and would win an easy victory. There had been division among the loyal people, but all united in face of the common danger, and, in addition, a great number of Democrats joined the Republicans in the successful struggle for the Nation's life. Then it was said by hostile critics that the Ship of State was drifting. It drifted—yes—with Lincoln at the helm, from the reefs of secession and slavery into the placid waters of union and liberty. Under Lincoln's successors it has sailed on, propelled by the winds of prosperity, save when its voyage has been halted by just such a visitation of storm and stress, of torn protection sails and broken business bulkheads, as we are now threatened with should Baltimore supplant Chicago, which it did not in 1890 and will not in 1912.

"Our friends, the enemy, say that the Democracy has learned its mistakes, and does not mean to repeat them. In some measure true as to the past, and the Republican Party has had a difficult, if successful, task in teaching the Democracy its mistakes, so far as it has been taught; but somehow the obstinate pupil comes forward every four years to be taught again.

Winning Democrats, He Says.

"I am glad to say, however, that many Democrats have learned their lessons well and are refusing to leave the firm ground of National prosperity for the quagmire of business disruption, trade depression, and commercial and industrial depletion. From all parts of the country assurances are coming that Democrats intend to vote for the Republican candidates and a continuance of prosperous business conditions, and against the programmes of economic confusion and socialistic subversion of our institutions supported by the Democratic candidates and their allies. Democratic workingmen refuse to be led from the factory and good wages of 1912 back to the Democratic hard times of 1893-97. They prefer independence and money in the savings bank to loss of employment and dependence on charity.

"Democratic business men feel the same way. They know that when industries languish their business languishes, too. The pay envelopes are the feeders of trade in every form. When they are empty or scrimpy the biggest department store feels the effect, as well as the corner grocery.

"Drifting? Well, let me glance at some of the drift. Our home market has drifted from $7,000,000,000 in 1870 to $33,000,000,000—not a bad drift that. And it is this magnificent home market, without equal in the past or present, that the Democrats propose to dismember and disorganize, and invite every nation in the world to prey upon, while those same nations keep the barriers to their own markets just as high as they please.

No Check on Foreign Trade.

"Then look at our foreign trade. A favorite Democratic argument is that Republicans build up and cultivate the home market at the expense of our foreign commerce, when the fact is that the growth of foreign trade has almost kept proportionate pace with the domestic—from $1,000,000,000 in 1870 to $4,000,000,000 in 1912.

"Our exports for the past year amounted to $2,170,319,328, of which $674,302,903 were manufactures ready for consumption, the largest export trade and the largest proportion of manufactures ready for consumption the country has ever known.

"The American manufacturer and the American worker would not have much spirit left for invading the foreign market if deprived by a Democratic 'tariff for revenue only' of the best market of all, more than equal in purchasing power to all Europe, the home market which they now control, thanks to the Republican protective tariff. German foreign commerce is also making great advances, particularly among our neighbors of South America, but a suggestion that Germany should for that reason take protection out of its tariff would probably be received with arching of eyebrows by German statesmen and economists.

"And this unprecedented growth of our foreign trade is accompanied by expansion as unprecedented in our home trade from one end of the country to the other, the Atlantic to the Pacific, the St. Lawrence to the Rio Grande. It is not a sudden inflation, but a gradual advance under favorable conditions from the prostration of 1907 to prosperity as substantial as it is general. All industries are humming, and there is work at good wages—princely compared with wages abroad—for all who are willing to work, while in the Pittsburgh district alone, I understand, there is a demand for at least 30,000 workers in excess of the number available. Business, wholesale and retail, is active and profitable, for the people have money with which to buy. The question for the American voter is whether this condition shall continue and the Nation shall go forward to even greater prosperity.

Farmers Prosperous.

"The farmers are enjoying the greatest prosperity in the experience of American agriculture. Every day the Northern Pacific is carrying a million bushels of grain to Duluth. The yield in that zone alone is 157,000,000 bushels, so that the conveyance by the railway of the farmers' grain from the region tributary to the Northern Pacific to that point of distribution will require 157 days. This vast crop is worth in excess of $100,000,000 to the farmers producing it.

"At present the steel industry, commonly regarded as the barometer of business, is driven to its utmost capacity, with orders far ahead for steel rails. Other industries are equally active, and, altogether, National conditions and prospects were never so prosperous and promising, provided the American people decide to apply to their political choice the same good judgment and prudent foresight which they apply, as a rule, to their personal affairs.

"As we come nearer the day of election it is to be expected that the intelligent voter will appreciate more keenly the responsibility which attaches to his ballot. In National elections, at least, the great majority like to feel that they are voting for a candidate who has a chance of success. It is obvious that either the Republican or the Democratic nominee will be be elected, and not to vote for the Republican candidates is in effect to support their Democratic opponents, and the Democratic platform of a 'tariff for revenue only,' freighted with dire consequences for the country, now busy and prosperous under Republican rule.

Third Party Not Expecting to Win.

"It is well known to every one, an open secret on every street corner, that the third term party does not expect success. A special correspondent of The New York Evening Post, writing from Chicago, says: 'It may be said that neither Col. Roosevelt nor any of the experienced politicians who surround him expect to carry Illinois or any other important State, with the possible exception of California and Kansas. From sources close to the candidate it is learned that Col. Roosevelt will be satisfied if he can complete the demoralization of the Republican Party.'

"It remains to be seen how many Republicans are willing to assist in completing the demoralization of the Republican Party, and handing the reins of government over to the Democrats to gratify mere desire for revenge. I believe that the Republican Party will be found, as a whole, too patriotic, too loyal to its principles and its traditions, too just in its attitude toward public servants whom it has intrusted with duties faithfully performed, to commit harakiri in the form and for the objects indicated. Every mail brings assurances that those who have strayed are returning to the fold, and that in every State in which the Republican Party is not disfranchised old-time majorities will be rolled up for the Republican candidates."

TAFT SPENDS A QUIET DAY.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Oct. 20.—President Taft spent a quiet Sunday. He was up early, and soon after breakfast set out for Gloucester, accompanied by Mrs. Taft and Major Thomas L. Rhoades, his personal aid, and attended service at the Unitarian Church there.

The President has a comparatively quiet week before him. He will leave Beverly on Oct. 25 to attend the dedication of the new National Polish Home at Cambridge Springs, Penn., returning here on Oct. 27. He plans to stay in Beverly until about Nov. 1, when he will leave for Washington.

The President received the following telegram from the Italian Chamber of Commerce of New York to-day:

"On behalf of the Italian Chamber of Commerce of New York and the Italian and American delegates to the Fifth International Congress of Chambers of Commerce who attended our celebration last night, and on behalf of all the Italians in the United States whose sentiment I am sure to voice now, I offer you my most sincere thanks for your telegram.

"We will feel proud of your appreciation of the Italian race and its contribution to the welfare of this great country. Your message will remain as a token of real and indissoluble friendship between the American and the Italian people. All those who were present at our celebration last night answered your toast unanimously with the words 'Glory and prosperity to the United States. Long live its illustrious President, Taft!'"

STRAUS RESTS IN BUFFALO.

Started for Chicago Last Night—To Speak in Milwaukee, Too.

BUFFALO, Oct. 20.—Oscar S. Straus, Progressive candidate for Governor, left here to-night at 9 o'clock for Chicago, where he is scheduled to speak to-morrow night. He also expects to speak in Milwaukee and Cincinnati.

Progressive leaders of the city entertained Mr. Straus to-day. He was the guest of Chauncey J. Hamlin, County Chairman of the Progressives, at a luncheon, and this evening attended a dinner given in his honor by Eugene Warner, a member of the State Committee.

During the afternoon he held a reception at his hotel for the district and general committeemen of the party in Buffalo and Erie County.

FIGURES FROM BARNES GIVE TAFT THE STATE

STEWART OPTIMISTIC, TOO

Puts Hedges Down for 50,000 Plurality—Koenig Sees Victory in Increased Registration.

Political leaders in the city were engaged yesterday in studying this year's registration figures, which showed that more than 25,000 voters registered in the whole city than in 1908, the last Presidential year, and that the increase was general all over the State. At Republican State headquarters the increase was taken to mean that the Republican candidate would be elected. Chairman William Barnes, Jr., issued a statement showing that, outside of Greater New York, President Taft would have a plurality of 110,224, and Job E. Hedges a plurality of 117,990. Mr. Barnes based the computation on a canvass of 495 election districts up-State, which, out of a total of 3,105, gave this result:

Wilson	51,264
Debs	1,985
Chafin	3,137
Roosevelt	18,363

Taft's plurality, 17,694.

The same districts, according to Mr. Barnes, gave this result for Governor.

Hedges	69,078
Sulzer	50,238
Russell	1,613
MacNichol	3,150
Straus	18,617

Hedges's plurality, 18,840.

This ratio, if carried out throughout the entire State, Mr. Barnes said, indicated a vote outside of New York City for President as follows:

Debs	12,394
Chafin	20,916
Roosevelt	114,860
Taft plurality	110,327

On the same computation the vote for Governor, he said, would be:

Hedges	433,147
Sulzer	315,157
Russell	10,091
MacNicol	19,665
Hedges' plurality	117,990

"These canvasses," said Chairman Barnes, "have been carefully made, and have been a reliable guide to the Republican State Committee for the past fifteen years.

Chairman George M. Palmer of the Democratic State Committee and William H. Hotchkiss, Chairman of the Bull Moose State Committee, laughed at the figures. Chairman Samuel S. Koenig of the Republican County Committee had his own view of the registration increase. He said:

"The figures give entire satisfaction to the Republican organization of this county. The big gains are in the Republican districts of upper Manhattan and the Bronx, and give proof that Republicans, within the last week, are coming to realize that the real fight is between Taft and Wilson—Hedges and Sulzer. Third term party shouters and workers have been steadily losing enthusiasm, and those who left the party realize now that by sticking to the third party in this county and State they would be doing nothing more than assisting Tammany Hall to gain a clinching hold."

John A. Stewart, campaign manager for Job E. Hedges, makes the prediction, based on the registration and on the result of polls that have been made, that his candidate will be elected by a plurality of from 30,000 to 50,000.

In Rochester the total registration was 48,095, an increase of 1,836 over 1908. In Syracuse the total registration was 33,211, as against 32,267 in 1908. Three cities which showed a falling off from 1908 were Buffalo, where this year's figures were 79,339, compared to 81,944 in 1908; Troy, where the figures were 18,458, compared with 19,475, and Auburn, where the falling off from 1908 was an even 700.

DEBS FEARS BULL MOOSE.

Admits That Progressives Will Draw from Socialist Vote.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—In a prepared interview, a copy of which was furnished to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for President of the United States, who is spending Sunday in Washington, admitted that the Progressive movement would reduce the Socialist vote on election day to a considerable extent.

Mr. Debs took occasion in his interview to charge that Gov. Wilson was an enemy of union labor. As for President Taft, he declared that the President was practically eliminated from the political situation, and that many thousands who had supported him were going over to the Progressives, "if not to the Socialist Party.' The Socialist candidate praised Col. Roosevelt's declaration that principles were more important than persons in the present campaign.

"The outlook from the Socialist viewpoint is most encouraging," said Mr Debs. "The meetings in this campaign are by far larger than they have ever been before, indicating the rapid spread of Socialism and the substantial progress of the Socialist movement.

"We are frequently asked if the Progressive movement will reduce the Socialist vote to any considerable extent. Doubtless it will, for the reason that it will take from us many who have more or less pronounced Socialistic tendencies, but are not yet far enough advanced to avow themselves members of the Socialist Party. But this does not mean that the Progressive Party will get any Socialist votes. On the contrary, it is well understood by Socialists, if not by others, that the Socialists are politically uncompromising, and that they steadfastly support their own party to the exclusion of all others.

"The appeal of Woodrow Wilson in behalf of the Democratic Party will fall upon deaf ears so far as the intelligent workers of the country are concerned. They are pretty familiar with the record the Democratic Party has made wherever and whenever it has been in power, so far as the working class is concerned. These workers are not overlooking the fact that in all his public career Mr. Wilson had never uttered a single word, until he became a candidate, that could be construed as being friendly to the cause of the toilers and producers of the Nation. On the contrary, he has taken advantage of his high position as a public educator to stamp the labor union, the only means of the toiler's defense, as an enemy of society. The claim is now being made for him that he has a friendly feeling for working people, but it is too late in the day to do him any political good.

"During the last six weeks we have been in all of the States, with four or five exceptions, and our observation on the whole is that Mr. Taft is practically eliminated from this campaign. The reason for this is that a progressive spirit has seized upon the masses of our people, and they are seething with discontent that is finding expression in a new political alignment throughout the country. The average man realizes that big interests, represented typically by Mr. Taft, have fastened their grip upon the Nation's industries and the Nation's politics, and that something must be done to break their strangle hold if any relief is to come to the common people."

STARS SHOW NO RESULT.

Boston Astrologer Says Congress Will Choose Next President.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—Dr. D. Derolli, an astrologer, issued to-day a forecast on the coming Presidential election. After reading astrologically the lives of the Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates he concludes:

"This problem has given me the greatest anxiety, for I know how intense the feeling is in every section of the country. The result of my study is that there will be no choice by the people. No one can carry enough States to be elected beyond a doubt. The election of the President will then be made a prescribed law, through Congress."

Dr. Derolli, in an article published in The Boston Globe on Nov. 4, 1900, forecast the election of President McKinley, prophesied his untimely death, and said that Col. Roosevelt, then a Vice Presidential candidate, would succeed to the Chief Executive's chair.

Concerning Col. Roosevelt, the doctor states that he will make a phenomenal run, but will find much treachery in his ranks toward the close of his campaign, that some of his strongest followers will desert him, but that he will make such a run that some of his optimistic friends will declare that he is elected.

WILSON WON'T SPEAK TILL ROOSEVELT DOES

CARRIES HIS OWN GRIP

Refusing Aid at Junction from Friends and Admirers—Goes to Church Here.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 20.—Gov. Wilson returned to his home here to-night just as determined as ever not to go on the stump again unless Col. Theodore Roosevelt is able to take an active part in the campaign. In the afternoon the Governor held a long conference with Chairman McCombs of the Democratic National Committee in New York. Some of the Democratic leaders, it was learned, have brought much pressure to bear to have the Governor continue his campaign along the lines of the Carnegie Hall address, in which he eliminated the third party from his discussion of the issues, but apparently they have not been able to make the Governor alter his mind.

"My plans have not been changed," said he when asked what course he intended to follow.

The Governor may speak in New Jersey, it is said, to help elect a Democratic State Legislature. He is anxious to make certain the election of Judge William Hughes as United States Senator to succeed Senator Frank O. Briggs, and he also wants his successor as Governor to be a Democrat of the Progressive type, who will carry out the Progressive policies.

Gov. Wilson is just as anxious as his managers to continue the campaign with unabated energy, and if Col. Roosevelt appears at Madison Square Garden late in the month, as he now hopes to do, it will mean a whirlwind finish, with the Governor appearing at Madison Square Garden and in Philadelphia. Last night Gov. Wilson remained at the Collingwood Hotel, New York, with Mrs. Wilson and their daughters, Miss Jessie and Miss Eleanor Wilson. They attended services at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in the morning.

The Governor and his family appeared at the Pennsylvania Station just a minute or two before the 5:12 train for Princeton. The train was crowded, but they finally found seats in one of the day coaches. The Governor's conversation with Mrs. Wilson and his daughters was interrupted many times during the journey by those who recognized him on the train and stepped up to congratulate him on his addresses in Brooklyn and Manhattan last night. There were a score or more of students of Princeton among those who greeted him.

At Princeton Junction, where he changed cars for Princeton, the Governor refused the aid of half a dozen friends and hurried off, tugging at a big traveling bag.

The Governor will remain at Princeton to-day. He will go to Trenton on Tuesday to attend to his duties at the State House.

AUTO TRADE IS FOR HEDGES.

It Will Hold a Big Mass Meeting to Boom His Candidacy.

In view of the referendum vote on the fifty-million-dollar appropriation for highways in the State, the automobile trade is keenly interested in the forthcoming State election. The benefit that a wise expenditure of this sum will be to the industry has caused the formation of the Automobile Trade League, which will hold a meeting next Tuesday night at the Hotel Martinique, at which time plans will be perfected for a huge good-roads rally later at Madison Square Garden. A circular letter has been sent to owners, dealers, and manufacturers in the State by a committee made up of Horace De Lisser, Chairman; Alfred Reeves, Gaston Plainttiff, Carl H. Page, J. A. Clark, James Nichols, and Clifford M. Bishop, embodying the call for next Tuesday's meeting.

The letter is, in part, as follows:

"There is no denying the great benefit this expenditure, honestly made, would be to the automobile industry, both manufacturer and dealer alike, but, unfortunately, politics have played such a prominent part in the disbursement of this first appropriation that unless we can be assured of the next $50,000,000 being spent in giving New York the roads that $50,000,000 can produce, the defeat of the appropriation should be encouraged.

"Fortunately, the nomination of Job E. Hedges for Governor gives to the State a nominee in whose sincerity we can trust, whose honesty cannot be questioned, whose advocacy of good roads was the premier cause of the movement in this State, and whose affiliation with country advancements and with the automobile industry since its inception, as counsel and legal adviser, not only to the Association of Automobile Manufacturers but to the Accessory Manufacturers' Association as well, stamp him, irrespective of any party affiliation to which any of us may belong, as the man upon whom we of the automobile trade can combine as a unit to place the responsibility of giving us the good roads we pay for and have a right to expect."

The committee has sent invitations to many prominent good roads enthusiasts throughout the country, including ex-Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks, to be present at the good-roads rally.

FREE SPEECH DEMAND IS MADE BY GOV. DIX

SOCIALISTS TO MEET TO-DAY

ALBANY, Oct. 20.—Gov. Dix decided to-day to take a hand in the dispute between the Herkimer County authorities and the Socialists at Little Falls. He sent the following message to the Mayor of Little Falls and the Sheriff of Herkimer County:

> Your attention is invited to the fact that the Constitution of the State of New York guarantees the right of free speech and the right of people peacefully to assemble and discuss public questions.
> The people of the State of New York look to you to see that these rights are not unnecessarily curtailed, but are respected in spirit as well as in letter, within your jurisdiction.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 20.—The Herkimer County authorities declared to-night that while they had given permission to the Socialist Party of the State to hold a public meeting to-morrow at noon in the public park, which is directly in front of several knitting mills whose employes are on strike, their attitude in regard to future meetings was undecided. Several of the officials expressed the opinion that this question probably would be discussed at a conference to-morrow. The officials say that at no time have they refused to permit political meetings in the park, but they are opposed to meetings which might tend to incite riot. They asserted it was for that reason that they declined to permit Mayor Lunn of Schenectady and his Socialist companions to address such gatherings.

Sheriff James Moon of Herkimer and Mayor Frank Shall of this city received a message from Gov. Dix to-day directing their attention to the constitutional guarantee of the rights of free speech and peaceful assembly. Afterward the Mayor held a conference with City Attorney S. H. Newberry, and at its conclusion said he would make clear his position in a letter to the Governor to-morrow. Sheriff Moon had no comment to make.

Although Mayor Lunn and his friends were not here to-day, there was an influx of visitors from the surrounding neighborhood. Crowds gathered in the park, including hundreds of the striking mill hands. Many of the visitors remained here over night for the purpose of attending to-morrow's meeting. Charles E. Russell, Socialist candidate for Governor, and the other State Socialist candidates are expected on an early train. Mayor Lunn has announced that he also will be here to make a speech. The authorities propose to be present at the meeting, taking necessary precautions to quell any disorder. Socialists here say that this meeting will be distinctly political in character, and that the local strike may not even be referred to by the speakers.

Several of the clergymen of the city spoke on the local situation at to-day's services. They upheld the authorities for refusing to permit meetings in the park during the week.

PROGRESSIVE TICKETS NAMED

Nominations by Petition in Nearly All Counties of the State.

With the filing of the nominating petitions of the National Progressive Party in the State last Wednesday, State Chairman William H. Hotchkiss announced yesterday that the new party had put complete tickets in the field in fifty-five out of the sixty-one counties in the State.

"The Progressives have not only nominated Presidential Electors and a full State ticket by filing with the Secretary of State nominating petitions containing nearly 20,000 names," he said, "but the party has named judicial candidates in three of four judicial districts and nominated 43 candidates for Congress, 51 candidates for the State Senate, about 145 candidates for the Assembly, county tickets in all except five or six counties, and city tickets in the few cities holding elections next month.

"In the few counties where nominations were not made, either the counties were so small as to make compliance with the Levy law, as amended by the Court of Appeals, difficult, or else local conditions were preventive. So we may say 200,000 of the 1,700,000 voters in the State have thus far indicated their affiliation with the Progressive Party.

"In New York County alone about 50,000 voters have signed the Progressive petitions, which is half of the Republican vote in the county in recent contests.

"There is now a complete political organization representing the Progressive movement in New York. All this has been done, and financial assistance given to up-State organizations, and the campaign now three months along, on a total disbursement of less than $90,000, including the expenses of petition work, which amounted to $25,000 alone."

JESSE GRANT TO VOTERS.

Sure Wilson Fights for Principles of Lincoln—Arrangements for Parade.

Jesse R. Grant, son of former President Ulysses S. Grant, who announced some time ago that he would support the Democratic ticket, issued an appeal yesterday to the young voters of the country to vote for Gov. Wilson. He said:

"As a son of the soldier who fought to uphold the principles for which Abraham Lincoln stood, and as a son of a Republican President, I can see only one duty for myself—to give heartily my influence and my vote for principle and not for the name of a party long since divorced from its sympathy for the common man."

Senator John J. Blaine, who was manager for Senator La Follette in Wisconsin during the primary campaign, also issued a statement in behalf of the Wilson National Progressive League.

Chairman William F. McCombs of the Democratic National Committee left here for Chicago yesterday to consult with the leaders there regarding the outlook. He was accompanied by Robert Adamson, secretary to Mayor Gaynor, who is going to devote some time from now until election to the National ticket. Others who talked with the Chairman before he left were James W. Gerard and Street Cleaning Commissioner "Big Bill" Edwards.

Mr. Edwards discussed the arrangements for the big Wilson parade here on Nov. 2. The Commissioner said that 13,400 foreigners had applied for places in the parade, 500 of them being Hungarians, who would ride on horseback. The parade will start at noon, and it is expected that it will take until dark to pass a given point.

CITY HONORS A NEWSBOY.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Twenty-five thousand men, women, and children stood in the streets of Gary, Ind., this afternoon and joined in singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," while the funeral procession of "Billy" Rugh passed by.

It was Gary's farewell to William Rugh, the newsboy who risked and lost his life that another life might be spared. The original plan of holding the funeral at the First Methodist Church was abandoned because of the enormous concourse of mourners.

An automobile hearse containing the remains of Rugh was encircled by a cordon of police while in the streets. The Rev. Dr. J. M. Avanan, pastor of the First Methodist Church, read a Scripture lesson and eulogized the heroic, Christ-like example which he asserted that "William Rugh, humble newsboy," had set for those who survived him.

"We called him a boy," the speaker said, "but he was more than boy—he was the superlative of manly man. Moreover, he possessed in remarkable degree the Christ-like spirit—the bravery, the willingness to lay down his own life for the extension of another's tenure on earth."

Grizzled workmen and officials from the big steel mills, bank Presidents, merchants, section men on the railroads, cooks and waiters from the hotels, and thousands of women joined in the refrain, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," as the body of the newsboy was borne away.

Members of the police force were active pallbearers, while the honorary list was made up of some of Gary's most notable citizens. Free Masons, Odd Fellows, Elks, Eagles, and other fraternal orders were in the procession, and 150 recruits for the Bulgarian Army, now in Gary awaiting orders to start for the seat of war, added the tribute of their presence. They were uniformed and marched in a body.

Miss Ethel Smith, who owes her life to the crippled newsboy's act of heroism, was unable to attend the funeral. She is at her home convalescing.

The body of Rugh was taken in a special car to-night to Rock Island, Ill., where it will be buried beside that of his mother.

BURNING STEAMER RACES FOR SHORE

LINER APACHE STANDS BY

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 20.—The steamer Berkshire of the Merchants and Miners Line, bound from Savannah to Philadelphia, whose burning cargo of cotton forced her to race for shore early this morning, is to-night reported by wireless to be safely at anchor in Cape Lookout Cove, with the fire practically under control, and the Clyde liner Apache, as well as lifesavers, standing by. While badly damaged, it is believed that the Berkshire will be able to reach Norfolk or Wilmington as soon as the storm now raging has subsided sufficiently to make navigation safe. The revenue cutter Seminole is expected to reach the scene before morning and relieve the Apache.

The Berkshire made the cove early this morning, accompanied by the Apache, in the face of a 40-mile gale. Lifesavers succeeded in launching a motor lifeboat and reached the side of the steamer, but, there being no immediate danger and the condition of the sea being such as to make a shoreward journey extremely dangerous, it was decided not to remove the twenty-one passengers aboard.

The lifesavers remained on board and aided the passengers in relieving the exhausted crew, worn out by hours of fire-fighting. It was with the lifesavers' aid that the fire was finally got under control and beaten back, until at 9 o'clock to-night it was reported that it had been confined to the forward hold.

It appears that it was only through the coolness and rigid discipline of the commander and his officers that a serious panic was averted Saturday night among the passengers and some of the crew. They wanted to leave the burning ship in lifeboats. But, with a heavy sea running, and the wind 35 miles an hour, it was realized that "'stick to the ship" was the best policy, and it was steadfastly followed.

It was 1 o'clock Sunday morning before the Clyde liner Apache, en route up the coast, answered the distress calls of the Berkshire's wireless and reached the scene. She stood by the stricken ship throughout the remainder of the night, and accompanied her to Lookout Cove.

A coast wire report, received early in the day, that the passengers and crew of the ship had been removed by the Apache boats and life savers, is denied by wireless reports to-night.

The strangest part of the whole thing to shipping interests here is the fact that the distress calls of the Berkshire, which began just before midnight and continued for two hours, were picked up only by the Apache, although several other ships with wireless equipment are said to have been in the neighborhood.

HELD WOMAN'S TRUNKS.

Mrs. Rubens, Ill, Refused to Identify Signature to Her Declaration.

On the ground that she was ill, Mrs. Horatio S. Rubens—entered on the passenger list as Mrs. C. de Lanar of New York, who arrived yesterday from Cherbourg on the American liner Philadelphia, refused to identify her signature on her baggage declaration. The Acting Deputy Surveyor thereupon sent her ten trunks to the Appraiser's Stores. Mrs. Rubens drove from the pier in the auto of S. Montgomery Roosevelt, an artist, of 57 West Fifty-eighth Street.

When the Philadelphia arrived at her pier at 8 o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Rubens and her maid were among the first persons to come ashore. Mr. Roosevelt met them. A Customs Inspector asked her to go to the desk on the pier and identify her signature. Mrs. Rubens refused and started to walk from the pier. The Acting Deputy Surveyor approached her at the gate and asked her to return to the desk. Mrs. Rubens refused again, saying:

"I'm ill. Send for a doctor. Where is my car?"

After the passenger said that she was ill the customs officials did not delay her, but allowed her to depart from the pier. Mr. Roosevelt and her servant stayed behind to see to the trunks and to get some of Mrs. Rubens's hand baggage. Mrs. Rubens stayed in her cabin on the trip across the ocean, where she was attended by Dr. Paul H. Tracy. Passengers arriving at any port in this country may give their keys to their servants to have their baggage examined, but they must first identify their signatures to the declaration signed on the ship.

Mrs. Rubens is the wife of Horatio S. Rubens, who was Secretary to the Cuban Revolutionary Junta in this city before the Spanish war. After the war he went to Havana. He is now President of the Matanzas Railroad and very wealthy. Before her marriage Mrs. Rubens was Miss Lamar, cousin of Quintius Lamar, who was Mr. Rubens's partner in Havana. In 1906 Mr. Roosevelt, who is a cousin of Theodore Roosevelt, was a guest at Skaneateles with Mrs. Rubens, and painted a portrait of her there. She spends much of her time in Paris.

Miss Ada Rehan, the actress, returned yesterday from her annual Summer trip to Europe on the Philadelphia, on which she has traveled regularly for the last ten years. Capt. Arthur R. Mills, commander of the ship, said that he had encountered strong gales and heavy seas all the way across the ocean.

GIRLS FLY AT HEMPSTEAD.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., Oct. 20.—William Harper, Jr., was the most envied aviator on the field here this afternoon, when he took out a number of attractive girls in his big yellow monoplane for grass-cutting jumps. Harper is an engineer of long experience, both here and abroad, and has spent much time with the Wright brothers, but he has never gone on any passenger-carrying expeditions at altitude.

Owing to the beauty and spectacular appearance of his big lemon-colored plane, the largest of its type in the world, it was selected for carrying passengers who wanted the aerial sensation but were not keen about leaving the ground, and so Harper was seen swooping low over the field here to-day with a number of passengers, among them Mrs. Gilbert Gordon of New York and Mrs. D. B. Wright of St. Louis.

15 CENTS KEPT HIM FROM JAIL

Crap Shooter Had 85 and Lawyer Put Up Balance of $1 Fine.

It is not often that a Magistrate is asked for a cut-rate fine, but Thomas Wayland of 337 East Seventy-seventh Street pleaded with Magistrate Kernochan in the West Side Court yesterday morning to reduce his fine of $1 to 85 cents, saying that was all the money he had. The Magistrate was obdurate, however, and told the prisoner at the bar that he was not running a bargain counter. A sympathetic lawyer present donated 15 cents to Wayland so he could pay his fine and go out and get a cup of coffee and a sandwich.

Wayland was charged by Policeman Webb of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station with playing dice on the corner of West Thirty-seventh Street and Eleventh Avenue. He admitted that he had been "shooting craps," and said, moreover, that he had lost almost all he had. He said he drove an express wagon for a living and wouldn't gamble any more.

DIAZ HAS PARLEY ON OUR WARSHIP

TO SEIZE ARMS ON LINER

We May Act to Stop Diaz Raiding Seguranca's Cargo—No Battle Yet —Our Recognition Sought.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 20.—The United States cruiser Des Moines, in command of Capt. Charles F. Hughes, steamed into port in the course of the night. An officer from the warship visited Gen. Felix Diaz this morning and arranged an interview on behalf of Capt. Hughes. Gen. Diaz then visited the Des Moines, where the American Captain and the leader of the new revolt had a long conference, the nature of which was not divulged.

While the Diaz revolutionists hold the city and the Federals have taken up positions on the outskirts, there has been no encounter between the two opposing forces yet. The Federals occupy positions cutting off communication with the interior. The feeling of anxiety among the foreign residents has been considerably relieved by the arrival of the Des Moines, and it is considered probable that a battle, if it is fought, will take place beyond the city limits.

In the firing which occurred last night between the gunboats and the fort, a man operating the searchlight on a gunboat was killed.

The Ward Line steamer Seguranca, on her arrival here yesterday, was warned by Commodore Azueta, in command of the gunboats still loyal to the Mexican Government, not to discharge its cargo. Capt. Jones of the steamship was ordered to-day by the company to unload, and declared his intention of doing so. The Seguranca has on board arms and ammunition for the Government which will be seized by Gen. Diaz if landed. Great interest centres in the attitude which Commodore Azueta will assume in connection with the discharge of the cargo, and what measures will be adopted by the Des Moines.

Two other American warships are expected to reach here at any time. The Spanish Consul has sent out wireless messages to passing steamers to proceed here to take aboard Spanish subjects in case of a bombardment.

Another Port Seized.

Alvarado, a minor port about thirty miles south of Vera Cruz, was captured last night by Major Zerape, a revolutionary officer. Tuxpam, 145 miles northwest of Vera Cruz, has declared in favor of the revolution, the authorities there, together with 250 veterans and 250 armed volunteers, taking part in the movement.

The rebel Generals Aguilar and Delallave are reported to be moving from the north to attack Gen. Beltran's rear. Beltran has 2,500 men around Vera Cruz, while the revolutionists have more than 1,500 within the city and 2,000 with Gens. Aguilar and Delellave.

The soldiers of the Twenty-first battalion, garrisoning Fort Uluoa, located on an island in the local harbor, have revolted and joined the revolutionary forces of Felix Diaz.

The gunboats Bravo and Morelos opened fire on the refugees, killing several and wounding others. The soldiers of the Fort Uluoa garrison remained inert, refusing to return the fire of their comrades. The situation at the island is especially serious, as Fort Uluoa is also used as a penitentiary.

Until the fire opened by the Bravo and Morelos, following the desertion of the garrison at Fort Uluoa, it was difficult to understand the attitude of the gunboats in Vera Cruz harbor. Commodore Azueta, commanding the gunboats still loyal to the government, kept his guns and searchlights trained incessantly on the city, allowing no communication between the boats and shore.

Diaz Still Sanguine.

Gen. Diaz continues to regard his chances for a successful revolutionary movement through optimistic eyes. He declared to-day that the officers and crews of the gunboats in the harbor were with him and that Commodore Azueta himself had promised to join his forces, only changing his mind in the matter at the last moment before the Diaz movement was openly launched. When asked why his shore batteries did not fire on the Federal gunboats in the harbor, Gen. Diaz replied that this would be wholly unnecessary. He felt that it would be extremely foolish to disable the boats, which he feels certain of being able to enlist in his cause shortly. He declared he daily sent the crews of the boats water, provisions and money.

Gen. Diaz further believed that the gunboat Progreso, whose whereabouts were not publicly known, to-day shelled and took the important port of Coatzacoalcos, which was also the northern terminus of the Tehuantepec Railway. He said the local garrison was left in command of the rebel ally, Col. Guevara.

Gen. Diaz also sought official recognition to-day for his propaganda by the United States Government. He said he had presented his cause to the authorities at Washington through the American Consul at Vera Cruz, contending that his possession of two important seaports and an army of approximately 2,000 men entitled him to proper recognition.

When asked if he expected an engagement with the Federals, Gen. Diaz replied in the negative. Many Federal chiefs, he believed, were about to join his forces, and others were too much in sympathy with his cause to offer him battle. At least, he said, he did not expect a clash with the Federals yet.

The commission of foreign Consuls will again confer with the Federal chiefs outside the city with a view to averting hostilities and safeguarding foreign interests. A local hospital corps was organized today and arrangements have been made for trains to carry non-combatants out of the city in case of a bombardment by the Federals.

Prices of staple necessities are rapidly rising, and the City Council is taking steps to prevent possible abuses.

22 Dead in Vera Cruz Clash.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 20.—Twenty-two persons are said to be dead and a large number wounded as the result of rebel troops firing on a parade of citizens yesterday in Vera Cruz. Earlier reports had fifteen killed. The demonstration was made to show the loyalty to the Government of those who participated. Failing to stop it, Gen. Felix Diaz, the rebel leader, who controls the town, ordered the troops to fire.

Gen. Diaz, according to a story current here, is greatly handicapped in the progress of the revolution which he heads by the lack of arms and ammunition. He hopes, it is declared, to equip his volunteers from a shipment intended to be unloaded from a steamship at Vera Cruz for the Government. When that port fell into his hands, Federal officials communicated with the vessel by wireless and ordered it to make full speed for Tampico.

Gen. Diaz, in a telegram to a newspaper here, says that his future plans depend on the attitude of the army. He declares that he is not guided by personal ambition, for, with the contending factions reconciled as the result of the new movement, he will call elections in which he pledges his honor not to permit his name to be offered. He adds that he will not accept candidacy for any public office, but will uphold the person elected fairly and who does not owe his elevation to a moment of madness, as happened to Madero.

Gen. Diaz says he has appropriated only funds intended for the payment of troops and public employes.

Rumors Worry Capital.

The city is a prey to all sorts of rumors. There is a growing tension of expectancy affecting the better element of the population. No news has been permitted from the Government offices, where by accord the chiefs refuse to talk and have informed the other employes that they will be severely punished if they give out information.

Heavier patrols than ever cover the city nightly. A sensational rumor current was to the effect that 450 members of the hydrographic force, who volunteered for service and went to the front, had deserted.

The Government announces its intention to form a division of 10,000 men for the protection of the capital under Gen. Heurta. Gen. Blanquet's arrival has been delayed on account of the activity of the rebels in the Torreon district.

There appears to be a growing feeling here that Gen. Felix Diaz is jeopardizing his chances of success by dilatory methods, instead of pushing his first advantage by advancing.

The American Embassy is protesting against the censorship in Vera Cruz of messages to it. The Embassy has instructed the Consul at Vera Cruz, William W. Canada, to intimate to Gen. Diaz that such interruption must cease.

It is reported that the United States cruiser Cleveland will proceed from Nicaragua shortly to visit West Coast ports.

SEEK EGRESS FOR AMERICANS.

We Require Mexico to Keep Line Open from Tampico to Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The United States Government has sent a communication to the Mexican Government declaring that the United States "expects" Mexico to keep open the line of communication between Tampico and Mexico City. This significant notice, while in diplomatic language, is more than a mere request, and is intended as a step toward enabling Americans in the southern part of the republic to make their way in safety to the capital or to the port of Tampico, where they would be able to obtain sea passage to places of safety.

Henry Lane Wilson, United States Ambassador to Mexico, reached Washington to-day, but his coming is robbed of much of its seeming importance by the fact that Mr. Wilson has been on leave at his old home in Indiana for some time and his knowledge of events in the southern republic is not as complete as that of the State Department. He declined to comment on the Mexican situation.

Secretary of State Knox will be here to-morrow from his trip to Japan, and he and Mr. Wilson will thorougly discuss Mexican conditions.

Huntington Wilson, who has been Acting Secretary of State for most of the time that Mr. Knox was away, returned to Washington to-night from a short trip to Chicago, and will participate in the conference.

Nothing has occurred to indicate any likelihood of a change in President Taft's determination not to intervene in the Mexican situation.

Part of Ambassador Wilson's business in Washington will be to furnish information as to the merits of claims already filed by American citizens against the Mexican Government for depredations committed by the insurgents.

In the course of the day Ambassador Wilson had talks with A. A. Adee, the Acting Secretary of State, and W. H. Deering, who is in charge of Mexican affairs in the Latin-American division of the State Department.

A dispatch received at the State Department to-day by Vice Consul Zoeller at Juarez said that southbound trains over the Mexican National Railroad were forced to turn back yesterday at Candelaria, forty-eight miles south of Juarez, on account of burned bridges. Mr. Zoeller added that in spite of the threats of the rebels to destroy the bridges if repaired, the Mexican Northwestern Railway Company was making an attempt to do so.

The State Department officials said today that the request for recognition of belligerancy had come from the Diaz faction.

STRATHCONA YOUNG AT 92.

Indorses the Health Rules of "Young" Mr. Harrison, Who Is 81.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Lord Strathcona thoroughly indorses Frederick Harrison's five golden rules of health.

"Let me see," he said in an interview. "Mr. Harrison is 81 years old. Oh, he is quite a young man. I am eleven years his senior, and am still young. Why, my memory is as good to-day as it was fifty years ago. I haven't smoked within the past seventy years. I do not believe in smoking. I certainly think people eat too much. For many years I only had two meals a day—breakfast and dinner. I eat very little meat, practically none, and that diet agrees with me. Exercise is decidedly the most important factor of good health and longevity, but, like Mr. Harrison, I have a great deal of correspondence to go through, and cannot always find time for strolls and walks. As for sleep, I make a point of not sleeping longer than six hours a day. I find six enough for me."

"The patient's general physical and mental state is excellent."

The Pictures of Polly

By MARY KING COURTNEY

VIRGINAL, and dewy fresh, all rosy with the soft radiance of delectable youth, this story comes tripping with laughter—a new kind, a new name. It is the fun of love, of iridescent love; the delicate tracery of coquetry, its text to-lean-upon-love-and-keep-your-humor-dry—a story that sings itself into one's heart.

It ought to have been written in violet ink—and yet beyond its laughter and its fun, beyond the moonlight of its tender witchery, there glows the passionate feeling, the ardent wooing, the daring—naked and unashamed—which marks the dawn of palpitant first love.

In spite of its sentiment it is a story first of all for men—women know so little how men are wooed, it seems unfair to even hint at this book's secret!

HACKETT CARHART FIRM GOES INTO RECEIVER'S HANDS

265 BROADWAY
841 BROADWAY

The Story to Date of the Creditors' Settlement Sale

After the receivership—when the Creditors had accepted 50c on the dollar—there was on hand in the Hackett-Carhart stores about 11,000 suits and overcoats.

At the same time about 14,000 brand new heavy suits and overcoats were ready but still undelivered by the tailors.

Since the sale began more than 10,000 have been sold—about one-half of which were medium weights.

This leaves in great majority the newest, most fashionable garments for Fall and Winter 1912-13. And these are being supplemented daily by deliveries of new clothes ordered before the receivership in anticipation of the regular season.

So it is that today the assortment of clothes at the Hackett-Carhart stores is the finest New York has ever known.

Here now are nearly 25,000 garments—and more than 20,000 of them fresh from the tailors' hands.

But—and mark this well—no matter if you choose among the finest of the Fall and Winter Clothes here—clothes that represent the very highest standards in tailoring and in fabrics—your average saving will be not less than

The Indestructo Trunk Is Imitated

Almost every trunk manufacturer in the country has at one time or another during the past seven years attempted to imitate the Indestructo.

No success has attended their efforts because "Indestructo" is a principle by which trunks are made without a joint.

In a great many cases, very similar appearance to the Indestructo has been secured. But if you stop to analyze the construction of such a trunk you will find that it presents far more weakness than the more familiar type of square construction.

Instead of eliminating the joints, as is done in the Indestructo, they have doubled the chance for trouble—two joints at every corner and every edge. 32 places for ends to give way, or loose nails to be shaken out by jars and jolts of steady travel.

However, to such we say—"Thank You."

Because, they have acknowledged to the trade that even though they themselves may not duplicate its strength and endurance, they recognize the Indestructo trunk as highest in construction and appearance.

SNYDER'S BAA BAA A MUSICAL MARVEL

HIS DOG'S A WONDER, TOO

Stole Keeper's Paper the Other Day, and Made Amends by Bringing Him a Later Edition.

Bill Snyder, head keeper at the Central Park Zoo, is quite positive that a most wonderful thing has happened there. As every one familiar with Zoo affairs knows that Snyder has had experiences beside which those of other keepers pale to insignificance, his opinion carries weight. Also his highly original observations on hitherto undiscovered and unsuspected traits among his charges have made him famous the world over.

Snyder gravely reported as he took a seat in the hay house after feeding the elephants yesterday that a few days ago he caught Baa Baa, once the pet lamb of the Zoo, but now the pet sheep, cultivating a talent for music. With this announcement a violent discussion started as to the extent to which sheep appreciate harmony. The dispute became so warm that Snyder was forced to break in on his narrative to part Bob Horton, his assistant, who insists that every one must believe everything his superior says, and Andy Smith, the veteran policeman of the animal house, who is a skeptic.

"You tell the story, Bill," insisted Keeper Keenan finally, and here it is:

"Long ago," Snyder began, "a keeper told me of a dog which, when his master forgot to give him his dinner, went out into the fields and brought back a forget-me-not and dropped it at his master's feet. I thought that was a wonderful display of animal intelligence, and it is the manifestation upon which I base my theory that certain animals think. The other day I came into the hay house, and from behind the feedbin there came the sound of the mouth organ. I walked around to see who was playing, and there, crouched down and holding the mouth organ just as a dog would hold a bone, was Baa Baa, the sheep, entranced in the sounds produced.

"Now, I am no judge of music, but it sounded to me as if that animal was playing the first four notes of 'Home, Sweet Home,' and playing them over and over again. I am positive the animal was beating time with his tail."

Baa Baa is the especial pet of Snyder. It was one of several lambs born early last Winter, which was brought into the hay house to live until it was able to care for itself. Baa Baa was so named because it was the most delicate of the lambs of its period, and bleated continually. Snyder grew so fond of it that when the other lambs were turned out on the sheep range, Baa Baa stayed in the hay house.

The mouth organ upon which Baa Baa can now play is the one used by Hattie, the trained elephant. Several times each day Snyder goes from the hay house carrying the mouth organ and the other things needed by Hattie in her vaudeville act. Snyder now remembers that whenever Hattie performed Baa Baa would always leave the hay house and watch the proceedings with much interest.

"I think that sheep got the desire to play the mouth organ from continually watching Hattie and noting the enjoyment of the elephant," Snyder explained. "The sheep, I am sure, has musical ability. What makes it so wonderful to me is that I never suspected a sheep had sense enough to learn how to play by watching another animal perform."

In the hay house Snyder has gathered some of his special pets, and the last week, he reported yesterday, has seen another example of animal sagacity. This would be almost beyond belief, only Snyder corroborates it. A few days ago his fox terrier in a spirit of fun made off with Snyder's newspaper. The keeper said the dog stayed away most of the afternoon and when he did return Snyder scolded him for the theft.

"That dog listened, and as he listened he became more and more ashamed," said Snyder. "You see I know [illegible]mal understands, and I could tell by the actions of my dog that he not only understood, but that my criticisms sank in. I fear my language was scandalous.

"I talked for a quarter of an hour, for I don't like thieving animals, and besides it is four blocks to the nearest newsstand. When I got through, the dog quietly sidled through the door and once out, went across the elephant corral like a shot. I thought it queer at the time, but soon forgot all about it. I had gone down to the lion house to look after Dewey, who was off his feed, and it was on my return that I found the dog waiting for me. He had in his mouth a soiled crumpled newspaper. I don't know where he got it, but it was simply an act of restitution. The dog knew I wanted my paper, and filled with sorrow for what he had done got me another.

"Bill," said Andy, the policeman, "was it the same paper?"

"It was," the keeper replied, "and, furthermore, it was a much later edition than the one I lost."

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 20.—The suffragists of this city and near-by places scored a big hit yesterday when they published for one day the edition of The Daily Home News of New Brunswick. The women did almost all the work, so far as the news end of the paper was concerned.

About Saving $2,000,000,000 a Year

WHEN the galleons of Spain came ploughing home, deep laden with spoils of gold and silver and precious stones from newly discovered Mexico and Peru, their freightage, which then astonished the world with its magnificence, was but a trifle compared to the wealth made accessible to man by the discoveries of science in recent years.

The late Abram S. Hewitt, iron manufacturer and Mayor of New York, once stated that the Bessemer process of making steel—an invention based on a scientific discovery—has added $2,000,000,000 yearly to the world's wealth. The discovery by Kirchhof of the inversion of starch to glucose by dilute acids is estimated to be enriching the United States by $30,000,000 a year. The story of the coal tar colors is one of the creation of enormous wealth as the result of the abstract reasoning of the chemist.

Thus science within a generation has immensely increased our control over natural forces with direct returns in remarkable industrial economies and material progress. But it has done much more. To quote a scientific authority:

> "The world in which we live is a "different world to every individual "in it, as it has been a different "world to every generation of the "race of men. To no other have "its confines been so opened out "and broadened as to our own."

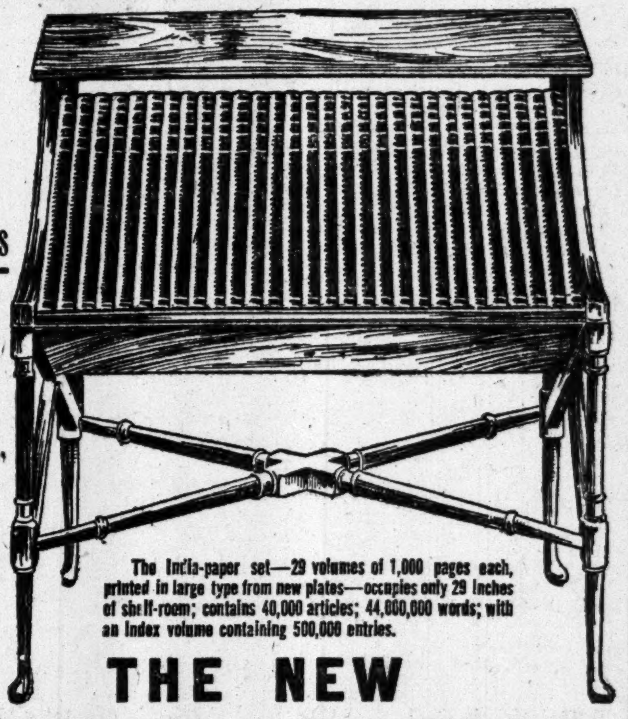
In the last twenty-five years the principles of the older sciences have been supplanted by new ones; new sciences have sprung up; new discoveries and inventions of all kinds are almost numberless.

An Enormous Book in a "Handy" Format.



The India-paper set—29 volumes of 1,000 pages each, printed in large type from new plates—occupies only 29 inches of shelf-room; contains 40,000 articles; 44,000,000 words; with an Index volume containing 500,000 entries.

THE NEW ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA

is the only adequate resource that will enable the average man to satisfy his needs for authoritative information with respect of the wonderful progress in scientific discovery which has made this age the most prolific of all history in practical inventions flowing from the revelations of science as well as in the growth of new conceptions, new theories and conclusions regarding the universe and its life.

In the pages of this greatest of books, which contains are recorded and interpreted for the general reader by the discoverers themselves—the foremost investigators in all sciences, in all countries—their latest results and speculations. Here too are clearly and authoritatively described the new inventions, new processes and methods in which applied science has achieved its remarkable triumph.

In many instances these accounts contain material which is made public here for the first time, the new Encyclopaedia Britannica being not only up to date, but serving to erect the guide posts for the future advancement of knowledge. Its reputation, established through a record of continuous improvement of nearly 150 years, has drawn to it contributors who are in large part responsible for the progress in the fields of which they write, including, for instance, eight chemists and physicists who are winners of the Nobel Prize, (the award given to the person who in any year made the most important discovery in physics or chemistry throughout the world.)

The new Britannica (published by the press of the University of Cambridge, England)* is the only encyclopaedia written by original authorities. It is international in its scope, origin, and distribution. It is the work of 1,500 specialist contributors from 21 countries, including 214 Americans, under the guidance of an editorial staff of 64 experts in England and America, containing in its 44,000,000 words trustworthy and easily accessible information on every subject which can interest an inquiring mind. Forty thousand sets (1,160,000 volumes) of this most successful book of our time were manufactured to meet the American demand.

New York City.

Dear Sirs:

In a recent favor you mentioned "The Land of Veiled Women," but did not give any description of it.

Please advise why you think it would interest me.

Yours truly,

Answer:

New York, Oct.—

Dear Sir:

We understood that you were interested in the famous "Foreign Legion" of France, now quartered in Algeria, and one chapter of the book gives the most vivid description of it from personal observation. Some of the bravest things ever done in war have been done by men of the Foreign Legion. Eleven times in battle has the Legion refused to obey orders when the trumpet sounded the retreat. You have also heard of the "Legion's breakfast"—two hours at the "double," and the only pauses allowed just equal to the time it takes to smoke a cigarette. This chapter makes fascinating reading. There are other equally interesting chapters on life under the tents in the desert on the famed Dancing Girls of the Ouled Nail, that wonderful tribe whose girls are marabout (descended from a saint,) who dance, sing, and charm. You can read about "Biskra, the Spoilt: the City of the Garden of Allah"; of Bon-Saada, the Place of Happiness, of all that remains of Carthage, the city of the Phoenicians; the heritage of Rome, the place where lovely Dido wept, and where Salambo loved. There are forty-four illustrations in color and black-and-white.

The author is John Foster Fraser. The style is fascinating, full of human interest and charm. The full title is "The Land of Veiled Women," and the price is $1.75 net.

Telephone any book or department store, and they will send a copy, C. O. D. Or send us $1.83, and we will mail the book to you. Personal check accepted.

Yours very truly,

CHURCHILL DEMANDS SERVICE OF CHURCH

Progressive Candidate Declares Religion Should Enter Strongly Into Politics.

SPIRIT OF REFORM ABROAD

Bishop McCormick Speaks on the Church and Labor at Social Service Meeting.

The Diocesan Social Service Commission held a social welfare meeting yesterday afternoon in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, at which the need for church social service was summed up by the Right Rev. John N. McCormick, Bishop of Western Michigan, the principal speaker, who said the Church must not only seek to play the good Samaratin, but must clean up the Jericho road. The other speakers were John K. Sague, Mayor of Poughkeepsie, and Winston Churchill, Progressive candidate for Governor of New Hampshire.

Mr. Churchill declared that we were arriving at the great truth to-day that religion was motive power, and that for some years past, with ever increasing strength, the "currents" had been sweeping over this country. Some of those who felt the "currents," he said, were beginning to see more or less clearly that God was in politics; that God was in religion, and that He had ever been there and always would be there.

He continued:

"And yet there are those who call themselves Christians, and who refuse to see that this leaven is working; that the world is continually getting to be a better and a brighter place in which to live. They point out the terrible contrast to be seen, especially in this great city, between luxury and poverty; they exclaim at the gross individualism and materialism which exist to-day. It never seems to occur to these persons that if we don't believe the world is growing better, that if we don't believe the individuals are being transformed in increasing numbers from the natural man into the spiritual man, we don't believe in God. One Christian said to me: 'I never thought of belief in God in that way. How can you prove that the world is growing better—will grow better?' Ah, those who are pressed into service are working for something which they cannot prove materially. Nor is their reward a visible thing. For the very essence of faith is that its object cannot be proved.

"If the voice of the people is to be the voice of God, we must see to it that our citizens grow up into healthy, enlightened beings, with education and light, and a little leisure. We see that the mission of the Church is to inspire, to send forth transformed, reborn men and women into the service of the Nation. We are regaining our belief in immortality. We are beginning to understand that life is growth, development through service, that we are living in eternity now, to-day.

Bishop McCormick spoke of the difficulty of bringing the Church and labor together under present conditions.

The charge against the Church by labor, the Bishop said, was that the Church cared more for the one sheep safe in her fold than the ninety-nine in the wilderness; that she emphasized individual salvation and cared little for social salvation; that she stood not for the Golden Rule but for the rule of gold, and that she had lost the democracy, the justice, and the righteous indignation of Christ. This he declared to be a mistaken view, and he declared that Christianity as a whole was the mother of modern civilization, and that without her modern democracy would not exist.

Mayor Sague said that the Social Service Commission had a message for the Church to-day, a message full of hope, of vitality, and full of human interest.

"The Social Service Commission," he said, "seeks to breathe into the social fabric the spirit of brotherly love, a spirit that shall make our faith a compelling force for the healing of our social disorders."

HOW FEEDS FELLOW-TRAMPS.

Millionaire Hobo Also Fills Them Up with Scientific Anarchy.

Word was passed through the Bowery yesterday morning that James Eads How, the "millionaire tramp," who has devoted his life and fortune to the betterment of conditions among the incompetent and the shiftless, was going to distribute good things to eat at the Manhattan Casino on East Fourth Street during the afternoon. By 10 o'clock upward of 150 hoboes had congregated in front of the closed door, and before the afternoon had reached its height this advance guard of the city's derelicts had ben swollen to 500 men and women.

The occasion of the free distribution was a mass meeting planned by a group of "scientific anarchists" in honor of Mr. How, who, despite the great fortune left to him by his father, a St. Louisan, lives the life of a tramp. But before those in the crowd could be transformed into listeners, it was necessary, according to Mr. How's theories, to fill their stomachs. At 3 o'clock, therefore, the feast for which the hungry ones had waited so long, and, as the police confessed, so patiently, was started. Coffee and rolls and cake, meat and jam and ice cream, all hurried in huge baskets to East Fourth Street by near by caterers, made up the menu. And everybody had enough and none went to waste.

By 4:30 there were no longer any hungry ones, and the 500 paupers, turned into prospective auditors, filed into the capacious auditorium to hear words of solace from half a dozen speakers.

Mr. How was enthusiastically acclaimed for his work in befriending the friendless and in sympathizing with that portion of the population which believes sincerely that "work's for workmen." And then, with more order than a political meeting frequently boasts, those of the crowd who who had one to go to went home to supper.

A BRAND NEW SWINDLE.

East Side Baker Sure He Has Found the Latest Confidence Game.

In Second Avenue, where one never can tell what the next variation of the familiar three-pea or gold-brick game will be, they have just discovered a new way of coaxing dollars from the unsuspecting.

The new trick took a week in the working, and a small boy known in the neighborhood played the familiar rôle of go-between. The victims were a generous-hearted baker and his wife who have a bakery shop at Second Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street. They started out to give some cakes to a poor lad who said his mother was sick at home and hadn't any money, and before they were through with the transaction they had given the lad $25 in addition, and are now holding an oil painting in the faint hope that it will be called for. The hope, however, is diminishing.

The baker's wife was the first to walk into the trap laid by the bunko man, who now has her $25, while she has his oil painting, worth less than one-twentieth part of what she paid for it. The small boy who begged for the cakes brought the painting in last Monday. He said his sick mother would be back next day to pay for the cakes, and would the good baker woman kindly keep the painting until the mother should come in. The baker woman obliged, and furnished the boy all the cakes he wished. She hung the painting behind the counter.

And then things began to happen. A man came in who insisted that the oil painting was a masterpiece. He was so taken with it, in fact, that he insisted on buying it right off for $25 in cash. But, of course, the baker woman could not sell until she could communicate with the little boy's mother. She thought how fine $25 would be to the poor sick woman without any funds, and so she sent for the boy. Would his mother sell the painting for $25? The boy said he would run and see. He came back bearing a message that the sick mother was willing, and also a large white envelope in which the money could be placed. The baker woman sealed up two ten-dollar bills and a five in the envelope and patted the boy on the shoulder. She thought she was doing a fine bit of service to a poor neighbor. The boy ran away, and then the baker's wife told her husband what she had done and how a man would be back in an hour or two to buy the painting for the sum she had sent to the sick mother.

Somehow the baker himself was not impressed. He went out to inquire after the boy, and was told by neighbors that they had seen him meet a man around the corner from the bakeshop, and had seen both go away very rapidly after the boy had handed the man a large white envelope. So far no purchasers have arrived for the oil painting. The baker has found similar pieces of art on sale at $1 and less.

WEATHER FATAL TO BABIES.

Deaths During Last Week More Than In Same Period Last Year.

The changeable weather of the last two weeks has caused a marked increase in infant mortality, according to a report just issued by the Babies' Welfare Association, as compared with the corresponding weeks of last year. This has been a disappointment to workers in the field of babies' welfare, inasmuch as the first week of October showed most encouraging results, the total deaths from all causes then being thirty less than in the corresponding week of last year.

Last week there were 273 deaths of babies under one year of age from all causes, as compared with only 256 deaths last year during the corresponding week. The increase was mainly due to diarrhoeal diseases. In Brooklyn there were thirty-two deaths from this cause, as compared with twenty-six in the same period a year ago. In Manhattan, however, there were only twenty-six such deaths, as against thirty-one in the corresponding week of 1911. There were seventy-three deaths from diarrhoeal diseases in the whole city, as compared with only sixty-one in the corresponding week last year.

The Babies' Welfare Association expresses satisfaction, however, over the fact that there have been so far this year 572 fewer deaths from all causes among babies under one year of age than there were at this time last year. It is remarked also that in Manhattan Borough, where the work of the association is best organized, there continues to be a decided improvement over the year before. Every effort is being made by the welfare workers to impress upon the mothers of the tenement districts the need of keeping up the fight against infants' diseases throughout the coming cold weather. As a result of this campaign enrollment at many of the milk stations has not only not fallen off on account of the cold weather, but even increased. All the stations will remain open through the Winter, and efforts will be made to educate mothers to bring their babies to the stations as conscientiously in the cold as in the hot weather.

MURDERS INCREASE DESPITE PISTOL LAW

EASY TO BUY FIREARMS

Advocates of the Sullivan Law Say the Number of Homicides Proves Only That It Is Not Enforced.

The Sullivan dangerous weapon law, which makes it a felony, among other provisions, to carry a concealed pistol, and which was advocated by a committee of prominent citizens when the Coroners' Office reports of 1910 showed a sudden increase in homicides by shooting, has not proved effective in Manhattan during the first year, ended Sept. 1.

According to the reports of the Coroners' Office, the number of homicides by shooting in the twelve months under the Sullivan law was 106 for Manhattan, only two less than the high record mark of 1910.

Of these 106 cases, according to George P. Le Brun, who has watched closely the workings of the Sullivan law as reflected in the Coroners' Office, and who appeared in Albany in 1911 in behalf of a more stringent pistol law, there were five homicides which were directly connected with suicides, and in which there was consequently no reason for making any arrests; 6 cases of shooting in self-defense; 2 deaths from gang fights in which pistols were used; 3 accidental shootings, and 2 deaths of burglars who had been shot by the police. Exclusive of these 18 cases, therefore, there were 88 cases in which arrests were in order. Out of this number the police made 37 arrests, leaving 51 cases in which there were no arests at all.

In 1911 there were 93 homicides by shooting in Manhattan. This record, running from January to January, includes the homicides which occurred the first three months under the Sullivan law. During these first three months there were 30 cases.

In 1910 the record mark of 108 was attained, and it was the publishing of this that led to the bill of Senator "Big Tim" Sullivan. There had been an increase within a single year of 80 per cent., the 1909 report having shown only 60 homicides by shooting. In 1908 there were 63 cases. In the light of these figures and with the Sullivan law in what purports to be full enforcement, the latest figures have caused astonishment.

"The reason for this unexpected increase in shooting cases," said Mr. Le Brun yesterday, "undoubtedly lies in the non-enforcement of the Sullivan law, which not only makes it a felony to be caught with a gun in one's possession without a license, but which makes it a misdemeanor to sell or give a gun to another without the presentation of the license."

In the Coroners' Office there have accumulated since the first of the year about fifty revolvers which have been used by suicides. These cases are considered apart from the 106 cases of murder. Mr. Le Brun pointed out that many of these cases might also have been avoided if the Sullivan law had been enforced to the letter. The law incidentally forbids the issuance of a public permit to any alien.

"There are many bright, new guns among our collection," he said, "showing every indication that they were bought just before committing suicide. In not one case did we find any pistol licenses among the effects left in our care. I remember one case in which it was learned that the suicide had pawned his watch so that he might buy a pistol. There is a number on each pistol, of course, and in many cases the pistol used could be traced to the retailer."

Confirmation of the statement that pistols are sold in New York in defiance of the Sullivan law was found only recently in the shooting of Col. Roosevelt, when John Schrank, his assailant, said that he bought his revolver in Broadway below Canal Street. A man who has had intimate connection with police affairs for fifteen years told a TIMES reporter that he estimated that no less than 5,000 revolvers had been purchased in New York contrary to law within the last twelve months.

"At first the retailers were rather timid, of course," he said, "and so were the pawnbrokers, who were careful to take all kinds of weapons out of their show windows. But this timidity soon wore off. On the Bowery one can again see weapons in the show windows, and the storekeepers are selling revolvers without a license, right and left. There are, also, more gang fights now than ever before."

SEEK FACTS ON OVERAGE.

School Principals Asked to Furnish Full Statistics.

Every school Principal in the city will receive to-day from the Bureau of Municipal Research a plan for locating "slow progress" or "over-age" children, devised by the teachers and Principal of Public School 188B, Manhattan, for boys. Full instructions are given for filling out the card so as to show how many of the 132,000-odd children reported by the City Superintendent as above the normal age in each teacher's class, and whether the teacher's particular problem is with the children who have lost time since coming to school or those who have started to school too late. The bureau is sending its circular also to several hundred out-of-town Superintendents.

The circular states that experience and inquiries have shown that children who enter between the ages of 6 and 6½ years stand the best chance of normal progress through the grades and that pupils that drop out at 14 before completing the elementary course are greatly handicapped in the struggle for existence. To determine the problem of over-age and slow progress in each class, teachers are requested to mark, among other things, the year when pupils began school, the terms attended and lost, physical defects, mental defects, progress, age, when a pupil drops out of school, and causes thereof.

The blanks will then show how a child has gained or lost time since entering school, whether it has important physical defects, and whether it is strong or weak in the following kinds of work: Informational, such as geography and history; expressional, such as language work, writing and spelling; manual, such as drawing, domestic arts, and manual training, and mathematics.

Asked Court to Cut His Fine.

It is not often that a Magistrate is asked for a cut-rate fine, but Thomas Wayland of 337 East Seventy-seventh Street pleaded with Magistrate Kernochan in the West Side Court yesterday morning to reduce his fine of $1 to 85 cents, saying that was all he had. The Magistrate was obdurate. A sympathetic lawyer donated 25 cents to Wayland so he could pay his fine. Wayland was charged by Policeman Webb of the West Seventy-seventh Street Station with playing dice at West Thirty-seventh Street and Eleventh Avenue.

ANOTHER TITANIC FUND.

Amos Pinchot, who arranged a benefit performance in the Manhattan Opera House last April the sufferers from the Titanic disaster, made public yesterday his report to the Red Cross Emergency Relief Committee, to whom he turned over most of the money obtained. The benefit performance brought in $11,956.

"Late in the Spring," reports Mr. Pinchot, "I had a conversation with Robert W. de Forest in regard to the best way to distribute this fund. I came to the conclusion that the larger portion of the fund should be turned over to you for distribution. Some of the most active members of the committee had from the beginning favored setting aside a part of the fund either as a donation to the widows of the members of the band and the firemen as a memorial in recognition of their heroism."

Mr. Pinchot sent to W. Frank Persons, Director of the Red Cross Emergency Relief Committee, $9,000, and a balance of $2,200 will go into the fund for the widows of members of the band for a memorial to them and the Titanic's firemen. The Red Cross Committee has expended the $9,000 by giving $1,000 each to nine families in need of permanent relief.

POLICE UNIFORMS BARRED.

Firemen Also Fall Under Ban of Bowery Pawnbrokers.

It was reported on the east side yesterday that at the last monthly meeting of the Pawnbrokers' Association of New York the association decided to make no more loans to policemen and firemen on uniforms and badges which the policemen and firemen failed to redeem when the pledging period elapsed. With the adoption this year of the new Winter coat, the demand for the now old-fashioned dress has gone and the pawnbrokers are out of pocket.

In the last few days signs have been exhibited in pawnshops about the Bowery designed to express contempt for policemen and firemen as prospective customers. "No police uniforms taken in at any price," reads one, and "No firemen's uniforms bought except the pants," another one says.

Tell it Not in Gath, Publish it Not in "The Streets of Ascalon." Do you know the gay and sinful streets of Ascalon, the sordid, selfish streets of Ascalon, where wealth and poverty clasp hands, where sated society dances, clad delicately in scarlet and gold, while miserable millions toil to pay the piper? Do you know the story of the speed-crazed, money-blinded social set who bring beauty, opulence and scandal to the shabby streets of Ascalon?

THE STREETS OF ASCALON

BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Read "The Streets of Ascalon"—It is a novel of the gay, demoralizing social world—the "magic-lantern" world—the world in which virile men can not remain very long.

Read how a beautiful society woman illumines in an inherent idler—a social upper servant—something he had unconsciously possessed—another self. How a brief contact with her evoked an aspiration that had never before given signs of existence. How in the midst of flattering, dazzling, deceptive society a great love grew, as pure and deep as any in the penniless world of shreds and patches. The big book of the year.

MARATHON RECORD FOR KOLEHMAINEN

Willie Kolehmainen, the winner of the 1912 Scottish Marathon, emblematic of the championship of the world, added to his already long list of records the fastest time ever made by any runner when he defeated Hans Holmer, the holder of the world's best record, yesterday at the historic distance of 26 miles 385 yards in the American professional championship Marathon at the Eastern Motordrome track in Vailsburg, Newark, when he covered the route in 2:29:39 1-5, the former mark having been 2:32:21.

Holmer ran second to the wonderful Finn, who, as a matter of fact, had a previous victory over the West Farms lad in the Edinburgh race in January of this year by a margin of one yard. Holmer's record was made Jan. 3, 1911, and it was stated that he had made a trip from abroad for this race. It developed, however, that he had not had sufficient time in which to fit himself—he has been home but two weeks—and, although he showed the way for twenty miles, he was unable to carry his pace through. Kolehmainen shook off the record holder beginning the last five miles of the contest, and set out to make the wonderful mark which he attained when he finished his grueling race.

The mark beaten was made on the Powderhall Grounds at Edinburgh, Scotland, that track being an ellipse of a quarter mile, while the course of yesterday was a complete circle measured eighteen inches from the pole, as provided by the rules.

While no comparison can be made between track and road running, which is the method pursued as a rule by amateurs and the vogue in Olympic competitions, it is pointed out that Johnny Hayes, the American lad who won the London Olympic race at the distance, was timed in 2:55:18 2-5, which performance tends to convey to a certain degree the difference between the abilities of the amateur and professional runner at the distance.

For twenty miles Holmer and Kolehmainen ran evenly, with first Holmer and then the Finn pacing. But at this mark Kolehmainen began to give the dust to the former champion, and in one of the finest exhibitions of long distance running that this country has seen, drew away until at the finish he was two and three-quarters laps ahead of Holmer, nine laps ahead of Karl Nieminen, countryman of his; nine and three-quarters laps ahead of Thure Johanson, the Swedish record holder, and fourteen laps ahead of Pat Dineen of Boston.

Both of the leading runners yesterday were in fine condition apparently. At no time in the long grind did either Holmer or Kolehmainen show any signs of distress, and they ran in perfect form throughout. Kolehmainen at the end of the contest seemed fully as fresh as when he started off, and some of the officials had to jump out at the end of the race to stop him from continuing nearly half way around the track at the same speed as his final spurt. Johanson found more difficulty in keeping up to the killing pace which the leaders set, and in the final five miles wabbled, but managed to stick it out for a fourth place after holding third place with apparent ease up to the twenty-one mile mark. Karl Nieminen came up running strong near the end of the contest, and managed to overtake and pass Johanson, and make a fair attempt to cut down the distance which separated him from Holmer and second place. But in the excitement of the breaking away of Kolehmainen the other runners were well-nigh forgotten.

The day and general weather conditions were prime for the event, which early promised to be history making in the annals of Marathon runs, and it was estimated that over 6,000 enthusiasts journeyed to the Motordrome for the race. The circular track, which bounds the wooden track of the Motordrome, was dry and exceedingly fast, so that everything was in favor of the runners except possibly the fact that in the track being circular instead of elliptical, the runners tended to draw away from the pole which measured the distance and thereby increase the distance which they ran. The Timers' Club, with Charles Dieges as head timekeeper, took all the times, and he will be willing to account for their accuracy. The track was also carefully measured prior to the event.

In addition to Holmer and Kolemainen as the feature starters in yesterday's Marathon, there were sixteen others who toed the starting mark. A purse of 1,000 was up for the winner, with additional purses for the winner of each lap. Thure Johanson, the Swedish record holder, was the favorite for third place at the start, with Jim Crowley of New York, the twenty-mile record holder, and Karl Nieminen, another Finland runner, to fight it out for the next place. The other starters were James Graham of Buffalo, Karl Herz of Oklahoma, J. H. Trent, colored champion of America; Pat Dineen of Boston, W. F. Prouty of Hyde Park, Mass.; A. G. Kent of Brooklyn, Alessio Yambro of Italy, Louis H. Semeran of Brooklyn, P. Commandeur of West Orange, G. C. Benfer of Newark, Joe Tingatella of Italy, Ed Toohey of Brooklyn, and O. Driscoll of Trenton. The summary:

McCANN'S SIXTH VICTORY.

Morningside A. C. Runner Captures Club's Weekly Road Race.

Charlie McCann of the Morningside A. C. romped home a winner for the sixth time this season in the weekly run of the Morningside A. C. yesterday over a three and three-quarter mile course. The second and third men were also members of the Morningside Club, Jimmy Manning, the former high school runner, beating Oscar Nelson home by two yards.

One of the largest fields of the season started, and it was a nip and tuck fight for the lead during the first mile. Near the second mile Manning, who was leading Nelson and Costello, jumped into a ten-yard lead. Manning appeared to be a sure winner, but after the third mile McCann, coming up from behind, soon caught the former high school boy. Once in front, McCann was never headed. Manning and Nelson had a hard fight for second place, the former only getting away from Nelson in the last 100 yards. The summary:

C. McCann, Morningside A. C., 19:53; J. Manning, Morningside A. C., 19:57; O. Nelson, Morningside A. C., 20:00; T. Costello, unattached, 20:10; M. Taub, unattached, 20:12; V. Doris, Ozanam A. Ruggiero Captures Pennant Run.

Frank Ruggiero of the Bronx Church House had matters all his own way yesterday in capturing the four-mile cross-country run of the Pennant A. C. Ruggiero's time for the course was 20:40, against the record time of 19:25, held by Harry Smith. The winner made his own pace throughout the entire journey, coming up to the finish line with a good margin over his nearest opponent, D. Gerrelli of the Italian-American A. C. James McCabe of the Dominican Lyceum was third. The order of finish follows: Frank Ruggiero, Bronx Church House; D. Gerrelli, Italian-American A. C.; James McCabe, Dominican Lyceum; J. FOR 18.2 BILLIARD TITLE.

Eight Entries Received for the Championship Tournament.

The 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament to renew the world's championship, to begin at the Hotel Astor Nov. 11, closed with eight entries. The entrance fee was $250. Those who subscribed are William F. Hoppe, George F. Slosson, and Harry P. Cline of New York, Orlando Morningstar of Pittsburgh, George Sutton and Calvin Demarest of Chicago, Albert Taylor of Milwaukee, and Koji Yamada of Japan.

Twenty-eight games will be required to make each player compete against every other entrant. Ties will have to be played off. The prizes are a challenge trophy and $3,000 in cash. The net gate receipts, if any, will be added to the total prize money. There will be four awards. Without considering box office proceeds the winner is assured of $2,000, the second $1,500, the third $1,000, and fourth $500.

World's Pool Championship.

The first world's championship pool match to be played in New York in nearly two years is set for next month at Doyle's Academy, when Alfredo De Oro, the champion, will defend the title against an old rival, Frank Sherman of Washington. De Oro has named the nights of Nov. 6, 7, and 8, the match thus beginning and ending in election week. For the first time in a challenge match in this city the new "open break" will be tried out. Each frame will consist of only 14 balls, the fifteenth being left on the table, and not tried for until the other fourteen are racked. This style of break removes much of the tedium of safety play, permits continuous runs without so many safety interruptions, and cuts down the time. The match will be 600 balls, 200 balls each night, for the new championship emblem and a purse of $500.

STRENUOUS WORK FOR TIGER TEAM

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, Oct. 20.—Princeton will continue behind closed gates this week in preparation for Dartmouth, and the Tigers are promised the most strenuous work that has yet been witnessed here. Keene Fitzpatrick in his two years of Princeton training has continuously given the athletes their stiffest work in midseason, and eased up on them immediately preceding the Yale and Harvard contests. These are evidently his tactics with the 1912 football eleven, for he saw last week that the men could stand hard pushing at frequent intervals. This would mean that next week, prior to the Harvard game, will make a sort of semi-vacation in the jungle training camp.

Princeton followers have considerable faith in their eleven to-day as the result of the clean sweep of Saturday against Syracuse. The game gave the coaches and the Tiger contingent generally a better line on the team than any previous contest. There is still a decided weakness in the play of the ends, and the situation at the wing positions is probably the chief worry of the coaching staff. Throughout this season they have been instructed to evade the interference as best they could, and seek to tackle the runner on their own initiative. The result has generally been the overthrow or the boxing of the end, and a resulting gain for the visitors. Waller and Dewitt, playing at secondary defense on Saturday, frequently found the Syracuse interference facing them, and the ends almost a nonenity. It is believed by some of the Tiger critics that these tactics should be altered, and there is some likelihood of the ends in the future attending strictly to dispersing the interference as best they can, leaving the runner to the backfield defense, which is almost impregnable.

With the exception of a few slight bruises, the men are in good condition to-day. Ed Trenkman is expected to return to the game this week, and his presence should bolster the right side of the Tiger line, which was wobbling many times on Saturday.

The physical condition of the players is a great satisfaction to Trainer Fitzpatrick. The members of both teams were prevented from showing their best on Saturday by the dusty condition of Osborn Field. After a few minutes of play in each period the men showed the effect of the small clouds of dust which enveloped them.

REST FOR YALE REGULARS.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 20.—Practically all of the Yale football squad had returned to-night from West Point, but it has been decided to use almost none of the regulars in the line-up to-morrow because of the severe game yesterday. All of the Yale injuries were normal. Bill Warren's cut head will keep him from the game only a few days, and Flynn will be rested till the middle of the week, as he is slightly lame from the strenuous game against the Army. Secret practice will be maintained daily throughout the season, and beginning to-morrow the intricate formations upon which Yale must rely in the games that form a climax to the season will be taught.

No shake-up in the eleven is planned, but the left guard and quarter back positions are still undecided. Nate Wheeler, the novice, who is being tried at quarter back, will be used regularly there this week, and some of the coaches believe that he will show rapid development to clinch the place for the final game. Cornell played the best game yesterday he has exhibited, but the position has been played far below the Yale standard all season.

Philbin's friends believe that he is blamed most unjustly for the fumble made yesterday as he sailed over the line with what should have been Yale's second touchdown.

A large number of coaches have been appealed to, to report by Tuesday, to assist in drilling the eleven in intricate formations for the final games of the season.

Foster Sanford will probably pay his first visit of the season here the coming week. Sanford is regarded as Yale's greatest authority on defensive plays.

INDIANS TO PLAY RUGBY.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Oct. 20.—The Carlisle Indians will play an international Rugby football match with Toronto University, champions of Canada, at Toronto, Oct. 28. This will be the first important international college Rugby contest in the United States, and it is expected to establish annual events. As the date selected is a triple holiday, it is expected that the Governor General of Canada and his staff with the prominent Canadian officials will witness the game. The Toronto University officials will invite the leading American football authorities.

The contest will be played under American intercollegiate rules, and the Toronto officials, who witnessed yesterday's game between Pittsburgh and Carlisle, believe that with proper coaching in the American rules the Canadians can beat the Indians. It is hoped that college Rugby games will eventually be played between American and English teams.

N. Y. U. Invites Fordham Team.

The New York University football coaches have sent an invitation to the Fordham coaches for practice games between the Maroon and the Violet elevens. Head Coach Tom Thorpe will accept the invitation on the part of the Fordham management, and probably will send his second team over to Ohio Field this afternoon for a scrimmage against the Violet scrubs. Later in the week the two 'Varsity elevens will meet in a practice game. Saturday's defeat by Rhode Island State has not worried the team, as it was minus the services of Capt. Hinchliffe and Mulvey. The men barred from playing will get another chance to raise the ban in an examination this week, and a far stronger eleven is expected to face Dickinson College Saturday at American League Park.

HEAVYWEIGHTS AT GARDEN.

Jim Stewart and Gunboat Smith in Return Match.

The boxing programme for the coming week in New York offers no bout equaling in importance the Coulon-Williams bout of last week, but some attractive contests have been arranged for the all-star shows to be held at the three leading clubs of Greater New York. The Forty-Fourth Street Sporting Club fills the void caused by the withdrawal of the St. Nicholas A. C.

The heavyweight bout at Madison Square Garden to-night between "Gunboat" Smith of California and Jim Stewart of Brooklyn stands out as the biggest fistic affair of the week. These two "heavies" clashed several months ago at the National Sporting Club in the memorable bout which resulted in the club losing its license because Referee Patsy Haley gave Stewart the decision over Smith. It was generally agreed at the time that the Brooklynite did not win by any great margin, and as Smith has had a continuous run of success since that time, Stewart has recognized his right to another bout. Since Bob Amstrong took Smith under his charge the Californian has learned considerable, and he is anxious for a bout with Bombardier Wells as soon as the latter arrives here. Stewart's recent bouts have shown him at his best, and Smith should have a difficult task with the Brooklynite, who will outweigh the Californian by many pounds.

The ten-round semi-final at the Garden to-night will bring together Joe Thomas, the New Orleans lightweight, who recently fought such an interesting bout with Jimmy Coffey, and Willie Beecher, the rugged east side lightweight. The opening ten-round bout will show Kid Burns of the west side and Young Ahearn, the Brooklyn dancing master. This will be a contest between a mixer and an extremely fast boxer. A strong six-round preliminary will open the show.

A heavyweight contest will also be the feature of the weekly show of the New Star Athletic Club to-morrow night. It will bring together Tom McCluskey of Bangor, Me., and Sam Citron of the east side. In the ten-round semi-final two Harlem lightweights, Carey Phelan and Dave Cronin, will battle for honors. Lou Meyers of Harlem and Bob Adler of the west side will do the honors in the first ten-round bout.

Jack Britton, recent conqueror of Leach Cross, will be seen in action again on Thursday night in a bout with Freddie Duffy of Boston, who is credited with having defeated Owen Moran just before the latter left for England a short time ago. Duffy has figured in only one bout here—against Eddie Sherman—and he won the bout easily. Britton's work in recent bouts stamps him as one of the best lightweights in the East, and the Bostonian will have to show up strongly to gain the honors.

In the ten-round semi-final before the Britton-Duffy bout, Patsy White of the east side and Young Reilly of the west side will clash. Both boys are unusually fast and clever. In another ten-round bout Jim Savage, the Orange heavyweight, will make an attempt to come back after his recent defeat at "Gunboat" Smith's hands. His opponent will be "Fighting" Jack Keating of North Dakota.

The usual week-end shows will be put on at the Fairmont Athletic Club of New York, and at the Royale and Gowanus Clubs of Brooklyn.

The five thoroughbred mares purchased by George Jay Gould from James R. Keene for $50,000 are to be shipped to England Saturday, and from there they will journey to Mr. Gould's French breeding establishment. It is one of the most important transactions in thoroughbreds in many years and the American breeding interests lose heavily in the exportation of such matrons.

The lot is made up of Deity, a daughter of Disguise and Isis; Curiosity, by Voter, out of Pink Domino; Swiftfoot, by St. Simon—Lady Reel; Biturica, by Battenburg—Berriedale, and Fairy Slipper, by St. Serf—Cinderella. Curiosity is the dam of Novelty, winner of the last Futurity run in America, and the champion two-year-old of 1910, who is now winning new laurels through the steeplechase field in France under the silk of Mr. Kohler.

Biturica is the dam of Maskette, another Futurity winner, and one of the most notable fillies in the history of the American turf. Swiftfoot is the dam of the yearling that was recently sold for $14,000 at the Lexington sale to E. R. Bradley, and each of the others in the list has earned fame both on the track and in the stud.

Wants Club to Buy Golf Links.

President Jose M. Diaz of the Hackensack Golf Club has made an appeal to the members of the club to purchase the golf links in order to secure permanent possession of the grounds. The fact that the leaseholds on the links expired last year, and the impossibility to renew them has made it necessary for this action. The purchase price is $70,000, one-half or $35,000 being payable in cash, the remainder being carried on a first mortgage. In order to raise $35,000 it is proposed to issue second mortgage 5 per cent. bonds. The club has a membership of 420, and for the past three years the earnings have been $2,000 a year. If fifty additional members can be secured the club will be able to carry charges on its indebtedness, and also set aside a sinking fund for the retirement of the mortgage bonds

White Retains Oakland Title.

Gardiner W. White retained his title as champion of the Oakland Golf Club yesterday by defeating Herbert R. Peck in the final match at thirty-six holes by 6 up and 5 to play. Mr. White showed poor form in the qualifying round, and barely finished among the elect. In the succeeding round he improved, and returning to his old-time form had little trouble in defending his title by winning his rounds at match play. In the contest for the Mary Garden trophy F. J. Arends defeated Frank H. Rossiter in the finals by 2 up. The affair was a handicap competition, and Mr. Rossiter had to give his opponent 28 strokes in the thirty-six holes.

MORE RECORDS GO AT CELTIC PARK

Sterling performances were witnessed at the annual Fall games of the Irish-American Athletic Club yesterday at Celtic Park, in which an Olympic champion, Ted Meredith, the winner of the 800 metres race at Stockholm, went down to defeat before Mel Sheppard in a special match race of 660 yards, the purpose of which was an attempt against the world's record of 1 minute 21 2-5 seconds, held jointly by Sheppard and Eddie Frick of the New York Athletic Club.

Louis Scott, the ten-mile champion of America, reduced George Bonhag's four-mile record of 20:11, made in the five-mile championship of America at Travers Island in 1910, and shaved 2 4-5 seconds from the two-year-old mark when he did 20 minutes 8 1-5 seconds. Pat McDonald, the Olympic shot putting champion, set a new mark with the 21-pound shot by heaving it 42 feet 4½ inches, and throwing into the discard Ralph Rose's 40 feet 3⅜ inches, made five years ago.

The hammer throwing event witnesed the downfall of Matt McGrath, still another world's title holder, when Pat Ryan got the 16-pound missile out the creditable distance of 179 feet 2½ inches, while the champion's best performance was 175 feet 7 inches.

Sheppard and Meredith essayed their try against the 660-yard record with the supposed help of the men in the 440-yard handicap to carry them along during the first quarter mile of the journey. From the gun Sheppard was in the van, and the manner in which he carried the youngster along during the first part of the journey presaged defeat for the former Mercersburg Academy lad, who is now a student at the University of Pennsylvania.

Sheppard rated along at a ripping clip, and when the men in the handicap had jumped from the track at the finish of their race he had a five-yard lead which the world's champion failed to cut in upon, and by which margin the generally invincible Mel won at the end with the time 1 minute 22 2-5 seconds.

In the four-mile event the field was made up of sterling runners most of whom have designs on the ten-mile championship race at Newark next Saturday. J. J. McNamara and Harry Smith, the junior National champion at five miles, were Louis Scott's most determined opponents and they had a merry race between them for the honors involved. The finish was all Scott's in better than record time, while McNamara had revenge upon Smith for his defeat at Travers Island, when Smith was first in the senior Metropolitan championships last month.

Pat McDonald, the Times Square traffic cop, was in a class by himself among the shot putters, as he turned out to be the only double winner of the day by taking down first place in the 16-pound event, with 46 feet 8 inches, and subsequently repeating in the 21-pound event, in which he made a new world's record. The summary:

100-Yard Dash; Handicap.—Final Heat—Won by Charles Mundt, St. Bartholomew's A. C., (5½ yards;) P. Kaufman, Trinity A. C., (3 yards,) second; A. Pepis, Irish-American A. C., (3½ yards,) third. Time—0:10.

BALL PLAYERS ORGANIZE.

Elect Officers and Discuss Aims at Meeting Held Here.

The first regular meeting of the Baseball Players' Fraternity, recently organized among the players of the National and American Leagues, was held yesterday at the office of David L. Fultz, 41 Wall Street. Mr. Fultz, who was a major league ball player of note a few years ago until he retired from the diamond to practice law, is the founder of the organization. Officers were elected and the aims of the organization discussed at yesterday's meeting.

Fifteen major league clubs were represented at the meeting. Both the Boston Nationals and the Boston Americans failed to send representatives, and Cleveland has not enrolled in the organization. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—David L. Fultz, New York City; Vice Presidents—Christopher Mathewson, New York Nationals, and Michael J. Doolan of the Philadelphia Nationals; Tyrus R. Cobb of Detroit, and Edward Sweeney of the New York Americans; Secretary—Jacob E. Daubert, Brooklyn; Board of Directors—Christopher Mathewson, New York Nationals; Edward Sweeney, New York Americans; Jacob Daubert, Brooklyn; Michael J. Doolan, Philadelphia Nationals; Ira Thomas, Philadelphia Americans; John Henry, Washington; John J. Evers, Chicago Nationals; George L. White, Chicago Americans; Tyrus R. Cobb, Detroit; H. H. Mowrey, St. Louis Nationals; Del Pratt, St. Louis Americans; John B. Miller, Pittsburgh; Richard J. Egan, Cincinnati. All the above attended yesterday's meeting as representatives of their respective clubs. The Board of Directors will be increased with representatives from the two Boston clubs at the next meeting, as both clubs are enrolled in the organization. A Cleveland player will also be added when that club enrolls, which it is expected to do in the near future.

President Fultz and the four Vice Presidents make up the Advisory Board which will have general charge of the organization's affairs. No definite time has been set for meetings, and these will be held whenever necessary at the call of President Fultz.

The first vote taken by the organization after the election of officers dealt with an abuse which caused the baseball strike last Summer, and furnished the foundation of the Baseball Players' Fraternity. It was voted to ask the National Commission to embody a clause in its regulations vesting umpires with full authority to eject from baseball grounds any persons using insulting and abusive language to the players. The umpires at present are vested with some authority in this regard, but the fraternity feels that a special edict from the commission would greatly strengthen their stand and do much to put an end to this abuse, as old as baseball itself.

The fraternity also went on record as opposed to rowdyism by players on the playing field, the violation of contracts with clubs, and all acts tending to impair the playing ability of its members. The member of each club holding a place on the Board of Directors of the fraternity is delegated to act as a supervisor of the players on his team, and he must do all in his power to make the players live up to their obligations. He is also expected to report violations to the fraternity.

The question of having a player representative added to the present National Commission was taken up simply to make the fraternity's stand on this matter plain. No effort will be made for such representation, and the fraternity went on record as being opposed to it. Since the organization was first launched it has been frequently rumored that such representation would be one of the players' demands.

Yankee Barnstormers Lose.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 20.—The New Brunswick baseball team defeated the New York Americans here this afternoon. The feature of the game was a home run made by Jack Martin, the former Yankee, who played for New Brunswick, and who made the hit off Hal Chase, who had gone into the box to stem the tide. The score by innings:

Berna to Quit Athletics.

It has just been announced that Tel Berna, one of Cornell's standbys in the long distance running game, is to quit athletics for good after the next intercollegiate cross-country championship. Berna won the intercollegiate two-mile championship in 1910 and 1911. He is a cross-country runner of the highest class, and won the individual title several years ago. As a member of the American Olympic team of this year he showed to advantage in the distance running events, but was conceded not to have been up to showing his true capabilities.

GUARDING THE ROPES.

European opinion inclines to the belief that the war in the Balkans can be localized and that it will be short. The big money men, in accord with their respective Governments, are most sure of these two propositions, and especially the latter. They say that not any one, nor all, of the four relatively small nations attacking Turkey have cash or credit to keep up the fight more than a few weeks. They infer that in a contest of this sort, self-limited as it were, like an attack of scarlatina, the big Powers will not let themselves get involved.

This is a reasonable view; but it is no more likely to be correct than the view taken in the same quarter two weeks ago, that the Powers would prevent the war altogether. The Powers could not do that because they underestimated the intensity of the passions on both sides, driving the Turks as well as their foes to arms. There has not been a war in modern Europe in which such deep and fierce feeling was enlisted, not merely among the rulers, but among the ranks of the actual combatants. On the one part, the Turks hate and despise, on racial and on religious grounds, the peoples who have defied and assailed them. The former look on the latter as rebels, traitors, unbelievers, and on themselves as Divinely appointed rulers for whom, at last, the hour is come to use their power and establish their right. The Slavs and Greeks, on the other hand, moved alike by the cruel wrongs of their brothers under Turkish rule, and by a long-cherished desire to extend their own borders, are as confident and as ferocious as the Turks themselves. Every step so far taken, where the armies have come in touch with each other, has been marked by burning and by slaughter, such as would be impossible in any conflict between civilized nations.

Beyond the borders of the field in which this savage struggle has broken out are the five great Powers who undertook in vain to prevent it. Two of them, Austria on the northwest and Russia on the east, touch the field, and are profoundly interested in its future. France is an ally of Russia, Germany an ally of Austria. Any clash between Russia or Austria would almost inevitably involve their allies, and England would remain neutral only with the greatest difficulty. Italy has promised to work with the other Powers, but her aims and needs are such that her course cannot be predicted. The task of localizing the war, and especially of carrying out the joint declaration of the five Powers, that in no case will changes of boundary be permitted, will be an extremely trying one.

There is, however, one phase of the situation, as described in the European dispatches of THE SUNDAY TIMES, which is distinctly bright, the indication of a more hopeful feeling as to the relations of Germany and Great Britain. It is announced that progress is made as to the Bagdad Railway, long a burning question, and that Prince LICHNOWSKY, the new Ambassador to St. James's, "has been giving to the English correspondents in Berlin a series "of interviews indicative of a strong "belief that Anglo-German relations "are entering on a period of improvement." If it shall turn out that these relations can really be placed on a firm and friendly basis—and this has for a long time been possible—it is not too much to say that the peace of Europe will be assured. For a number of years now every movement of significance in European affairs has turned on how it would affect the relative strength of Great Britain or of Germany. Vast armaments have been created on land and sea which would have been much smaller had peace been reasonably sure between these Powers.

A PATRONYMIC SOCIETY.

Mr. ALEXANDER KONTA points out in his letter to THE TIMES, printed elsewhere, a possible obstacle to the execution of the plan which he suggested recently of providing a system of nomenclature for immigrants desirous of Americanizing their names. Instead of preserving their original names in an Americanized form, they are quite at liberty to appropriate the names of historic American families, like the Washingtons, Jeffersons, Lees, Lenoxes, Livingstons, and Fairfaxes. If laws be enacted against such pilfering by those who have not sufficiently developed the patronymic sense, it will be difficult to enforce them. The individual bearing another's family name might disappear with it over our vast sociological frontiers.

There is no copyright law in this country for safeguarding property in personal names. But Mr. KONTA is right in concluding that the organization of a Patronymic Society, with branches in States where aliens most inhabit, aiding in the establishment of official Bureaus of Patronymics to have oversight of changes of name, is a need of the Nation. THE TIMES has printed the letter of Prof. H. A. TODD of Columbia, giving to the plan the weight of his distinguished approval. The best and most representative among the naturalized aliens of this country would, we are sure, welcome cordially the proposal that family names be kept as a matter of proper pride, and Americanized by a natural process of simplification.

A TIP ON KINGS.

It may not be very useful to most of us, but it is interesting and agreeable to learn from Mr. CARNEGIE his little device for getting on comfortably with Kings. The first and the last thing to do in the royal presence is to laugh; as royal interviews are usually brief, it is fair to infer that the laughing is practically continuous.

Mr. CARNEGIE realizes, apparently, that a visitor who monopolized the laughing might not appear to advantage; but he says that, in his experience, this seldom happens. "As a general rule"—we suppose ninety times in a hundred—"the monarch doesn't mind "it. He knows he is something of a "faker, and laughs with me." There is an uncanny suggestion here of the traditional laughing of the augurs, but we hardly think it was intended. Mr. CARNEGIE is not in the least a faker; he is one of the simplest and most transparent of men. And he is not given to causeless laughter. We may be sure if Kings usually laugh with him he gives them good reason. Thus we have an emendation of the proverb, "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before Kings"—and laugh.

REGISTRATION AND VOTING.

In New York City 707,826 male citizens 21 years of age or over will be entitled to vote Nov. 5. In 1908 the total registration in the four boroughs was 682,091. The total vote in the city for President that year was 638,891, including 284,569 for BRYAN and 300,998 for TAFT, DEBS (Socialist) receiving 25,965 and HISGEN (Independence League) 27,358 votes. More than 6 per cent. of the registered refrained from voting. Mr. BRYAN, the Democratic candidate, carried all the boroughs except Kings, in which Mr. TAFT's plurality of 23,112 gave him the lead in the greater city.

Conditions are very different this year, when there are three tickets in the field. If only 6 per cent. of those who have registered fail to vote, the total vote will be about 665,000, and no large number of Democrats are likely to withhold votes from the regular candidate of their party for any such reason as led to a large withdrawal of support from Mr. BRYAN. On the other hand, the Republicans cannot rely on independent Democrats for support, as they did four years ago. How far the Progressive Party will influence the election in this city nobody can guess.

In 1910 Gov. DIX led his ticket in this city by 14,025 votes in Manhattan and the Bronx, 4,000 in Kings, and by only a few votes in Richmond, the vote in Queens being about the same for the Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor. This, however, was scarcely a fair indication of the revolt among local Republicans against Mr. ROOSEVELT, as many refrained from voting. There are indications in the reduced registration in some of the strongly Republican Assembly districts of Republican apathy this year, while the greatly increased registration in districts far uptown indicates merely a large increase of residents within the last four years, and any political deductions based upon it would be of dubious value.

As to the thousands of men of voting age, resident in this city, who have lost their right to vote by failing to register, some curiosity is inevitable. Sickness, affliction, pressing business which has kept them away from their homes, have doubtless prevented many from registering, but there must be many others who have lost their privilege through carelessness or lack of interest. That any American citizen should lack interest in the outcome of the present campaign is amazing and deplorable.

LAW FOR LABOR TRUSTS.

Mr. GOMPERS's remarks on the decision in the hatters' case were in part as follows:

> The trusts which the Sherman law was formed to regulate are selfish organizations, selfish in the business sense, while the labor unions are formed to uplift the masses and see that they get their rights. The labor unions are striving to better the conditions of the workers, and no one can deny that they have helped to uplift the workers. We contend that, in spite of the interpretations of some jurists to the contrary, the Sherman anti-trust law was never intended to include labor unions.

The fact is that the exception of labor unions from the anti-trust law was explicitly and specifically negatived when the original law was pending, and has been negatived in almost every Congress since. It is more sure to be rejected by each and every succeeding Congress because of the incidents which prove that labor unions are not altogether such organizations as Mr. GOMPERS describes them to be. The labor unions are in some ways more selfish than the capitalist trusts. The labor trust attempts to dictate terms and conditions of labor to capitalists, and also to workers outside the unions, although the unionists number a small fifth, perhaps no more than one-tenth of the class for which they assume to speak. The unions are so far from trying to uplift the masses that by the closed shop demand this small minority makes the conditions of livelihood more difficult for the majority. The unionists conduct their propaganda by methods which the Supreme Court of the United States has decided to be unlawful, and which juries have found to be "unfair." The Standard Oil and Tobacco Trusts were hardly in a worse position before the law than the Federation of Labor.

It is important for the federation to understand this both individually and collectively. The federation is a mere voluntary association, such as it has been thought the law could not reach for lack of incorporation. But the hatters' case shows that judgments can be found against individual members, and executed against their property, even their savings bank accounts. This is not the practical result in the hatters' case for the reason that the federation had taken over all the attached property, and, therefore, the judgment against the individuals falls upon the organization which had made itself responsible. Therefore no sympathy need be wasted upon the individual unionists who lose nothing, even receiving wages while testifying in their own behalf. The entire burden of thrice $84,000 therefore falls upon the federation, and the cause of uplift is crippled to that extent. Presumably this may moderate excess of zeal for uplift by the boycott in the interest of so small a fraction of the masses. Still the effect is not so very cautionary. An assessment of 15 cents will pay the bill, and all is not lost so long as Mr. GOMPERS can be paid for urging Congress to sanction what courts and juries condemn, a thing repugnant to the sense of justice of every disinterested man.

JUST RESENTMENT.

We need not take the resentment of the great audience, in the Brooklyn Academy of Music Saturday evening, of the attempted interruption of Gov. WILSON's address by Miss MAUD MALONE as an indication that everybody present who hissed the woman was a convinced opponent of woman suffrage. Doubtless many have never given serious thought to the subject. Perhaps as many have frequently expressed themselves, it may be without much thinking, in favor of extending the ballot to the women. Miss MALONE was employing means for the advancement of her cause which have not been tolerated in this country, and, we trust, will not be. The audience had assembled to hear Gov. WILSON, and was determined to hear him and him only.

Miss MALONE's questions were not pertinent to the subject of the night's discourse. Woman suffrage is not an issue of this political campaign. If it is ever an issue in a political campaign it will not be made so by employment of the methods of the British militant suffragettes. In the circumstances Miss MALONE's interruption was as impertinent as if she had asked the candidate his opinion of "The Affairs of Anatol," or the latest precious novel of Mr. WELLS. Gov. WILSON treated her with perfect courtesy, but the treatment she received from others, including the police, was that which she richly deserved. The cause of woman suffrage, if it is to be a vital cause, would be better served if such advocates could be summarily suppressed.

THE SOURCES OF HISTORY.

Last Wednesday the American Antiquarian Society celebrated its centennial at Worcester, Mass. The principal speaker at the closing exercises was President TAFT, who said some very wise and practical things about the making of history, a most difficult task, even under favorable conditions, and utterly hopeless if the materials upon which the historian must build, if he build wisely and well, are not preserved for his study and reflection. The President said:

> What we have to get is contemporary evidence, and we have to dissect that; and what you in a society like this are doing, if I understand it, is the accumulation of that contemporaneous evidence that gives, first, as nearly as possible, an accurate statement of what occurred, and, second, gives the atmosphere in which the things occurred which make up history. That is what I understand an antiquarian society like this is for. Heaven knows we would not want to preserve many of the newspapers [laughter] for any other purpose than to give the correct local coloring in which we are to judge the events and the facts that happen.

Doubtless there was "laughter" when the President said this, and it must be admitted that he has abundant provocation for his slap at the newspapers, but, if the historian must have "the atmosphere," there is no better medium through which he can get it than the newspapers, which record the doings of the day—a very murky atmosphere at times, forsooth, but "the" atmosphere, all the same, in which "the facts happen." As matter of fact, the newspapers, true to their preservative art, might well be called the handmaidens of history.

There can be no question of the importance of the suggestion made by the President and the work that is done by historical societies interested in keeping together the "landmarks of history," and the enormous waste of good material because there has been no one to care for it is positively one of the sins of the fathers. They were too busy building, perhaps, to save the plans. We should not be likewise guilty of their neglect. Many of the controversies of history would have been impossible had "the facts" been saved. All the facts about BARBARA FRIETCHIE, and PAUL REVERE, and ANDREW JACKSON's birthplace, and the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence would have been preserved had local and National historical societies been faithful to their opportunities and duty.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Authoritative Views of the Case.

Both The New York Medical Record and The New York Medical Journal, in professional comment for professional readers, convey to readers not of that class welcome assurance that the present probability of serious results from Col. ROOSEVELT's wound is not great enough to awaken even slight apprehension. Each of these authorities confidently expects his rapid and complete recovery, for the reason that, the patient having now been brought under proper subjection, and his usual good fortune having saved him from the ill-effects that might have followed his rash refusal to submit to treatment immediately after his injury was received, he will now be safe under the management of doctors as skillful as his.

In the course of its remarks, The Record makes a statement exemplifying a theory which, whenever the layman hears it, as he often does in one form or another, amuses or disquiets him, depending on its personal application. "If the newspaper accounts are correct," says The Record, "the intended victim is suffering from a wound of slight moment, "despite a broken rib, and had he been "an ordinary citizen his case would have "given the surgeons but little concern."

This is a tacit admission that something other than the intrinsic nature of a "case" determines the "concern" with which a doctor regards it, and every such admission gives the citizen not extraordinary some cause for thought and wonder. The professional explanation of the difference usually brings in the words "heavier responsibilities," but that doesn't better the situation much for the citizen who knows that he would be regarded as "ordinary."

The notable sentence in The Journal's article treats the Colonel's wound somewhat less lightly, but adequately explains the confident expectation of speedy recovery:

> Never has there been a more striking demonstration of the superb resisting power developed by clean, temperate living and systematic attention to physical culture, which have built up the former President from a delicate youth to a man whose physical characteristics excited the admiration of the attending surgeons, men not lacking experience in the examination of athletes.

Memories Can Be Too Good.

In a public demonstration made last week by the inventor and exploiter of a mnemonic system, he repeated in their order the cards as they came from a well-shuffled pack, that order having been but once read off to him, and he did a number of other similar things that would be quite impossible for a vast majority of the people with memories that would be called good. The performer of these marvels expressed, naturally enough, the opinion that abilities such as his are of great value and importance, and, as naturally, he advised others to acquire them through the use of his method.

It is not necessary to deny the merit of that method, and possibly enough its employment would lessen for almost anybody the unquestionable inconveniences of forgetfulness. That it would enable almost anybody, or more than a very few, to emulate the achievements of its inventor is more than questionable, however, and equally questionable is it whether the power to do so is desirable.

A good memory is, indeed, the mark, as it is the basis, of high intelligence, but, in most of the recorded instances, really prodigious or phenomenal memories have been possessed by men who had few or no other mental distinctions, and certainly nothing is more dangerous than overdependence on this valuable faculty. Facility in "learning by heart," as the saying is, often goes with lack of judgment and very rarely with even a moderate degree of creative ability. The specialists in mnemonics are like most other specialists—good for little or nothing in any other direction. The teacher whose ideal recitation is a word-for-word repetition of sections from a textbook is a lazy incompetent who is injuring the mind of every child under him, and most injuring those whom he scores "100" in his miserable record of percentages.

All of us, or almost all of us, can remember well enough the things in which we are particularly interested; when we find things like the order of a shuffled pack of cards sticking in memory, we should be, not proud, but frightened, just as we should be if we discover that we can play blindfold a dozen games of chess, or even one. That way lies madness or imbecility. Of memory as of other good things there is the possibility of having too much. With enough of it we should be content. Books of reference are abundant, pencils and paper are cheap, and nine times out of ten the knowledge of where to find a fact is as valuable as the memory of it.

Seeing with One Eye.

Mr. MARCONI will probably find himself able to do his work about as well, though not quite as conveniently, with one eye as with two. For the rest of his life, to be sure, he will be unable to see stereoptically—that is, he will henceforth lack the assistance in the judgment of distances and solids that comes from seeing with each eye a small fraction of the object inspected that is invisible to the other eye when both are simultaneously directed at it. To this deprivation, however, the one-eyed man soon accustoms himself, just as we all do to the viewing of pictures, which are single-dimensioned presentations of three-dimensioned forms.

He effects the adaptation, developing to an abnormal degree the common power of perspective measurement, and though he sees an apple or a face as flat, so well does he know the rotundity of both that his mind unconsciously corrects the eye's report.

In the days when search for what were called "evidences of design in nature" was made by more people than now the fact that we have two eyes instead of one was often adduced as an admirable specimen, since it enables us to lose half of our most priceless possession and still get along fairly well. That we have only one heart, an organ also essential to existence, was ignored, after the fashion of all such logicians, and they forgot, too, the curious circumstance that "nature" is careless enough to allow many injuries to one eye soon to affect the other quite as seriously unless interfering man, as in the case of Mr. MARCONI, steps in to save the uninjured eye by removing its mate.

Only for this, thousands and thousands of men who are now going comfortably about their business and pleasure would be forever in the dreadful night of complete blindness. The often-mentioned margin of safety as to sight is made a reality by the surgeons, not by "nature."

DEATH RATE OVER 40.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In last Sunday's TIMES you published an interesting article entitled, "Death Rate of Those Over 40 Alarmingly Increased."

The article says that, while the general death rate has been reduced 25 per cent. in the last thirty years, it has in the same period steadily increased up to about 27 per cent. in the case of persons over 40 years, which latter increase is called "alarming." A close analysis, I believe, will show that this conclusion is not correct.

To illustrate: As all persons must die, the death rate for the entire life period must be 100 per cent. If we reduce the death rate in youth, then it must be correspondingly increased in old age. If no person were to die under 40 years of age, (death rate for this period = 0,) then all persons would die over 40 years of age, (death rate for this period = 100 per cent.) In other words, the fewer persons die when young the more persons must die when old. Modern sanitation has reduced the unnatural death rate of the young, and therefore increased the natural death rate of the old.

This fact is surely not "alarming," but instead shows the accomplishment of the very result which all sanitarians have been striving to obtain. The diagrams in your article are therefore quite encouraging. They show graphically how by the decreased death rate in early life, and by the increased rate in later life, a large percentage of persons must have been enabled to live a longer life, and therefore more closely approach the age limit when all persons must necessarily die.

If every person on earth lived to be 100 years old, then the total death rate per annum would be 1 per cent., or 10 deaths per 1,000 persons living. As all persons, however, do not live to be 100 years old, the average death rate per annum must be correspondingly higher than 10 per 1,000. In communities in which the population increases by the immigration of young persons, having the longest expectancy of life, the average death rate per annum may be below 10 per 1,000, as is the case in some of our frontier cities. If the population should be increased by the immigration of persons with a low expectancy of life, as, for instance, older persons, the average death rate per annum would be higher. In both cases the result is quite independent of deaths caused by diseases or accidents, and in the latter is therefore no cause for alarm. Equally so is the increase in the general death rate above middle age, when it is coincident with a corresponding decrease under middle age.

IS WOMAN UNDERSTOOD?

No, Sir; woman is not understandable to man. Every one knows what a man thinks—principally nothing—and he is perfectly frank in the expression of his thoughts. A woman gives her hand to him in loving confidence, and then withholds it forever afterward. I am appallingly close to 60 years of age. The age of my wife is variable, or enshrouded in mystery to all who have not known her from birth. While frank to declare after thirty years of marriage that she is a delightful old fellow, she remains incomprehensible. I frequently give expression to views which I modestly and conscientiously approve as irrefutable and conclusive in logic. On some occasions she meets them with a smile in which the girlish coyness of thirty years ago is blended with one of indulgence or something else for which at the moment I cannot find a word. I cannot suspect that she is trying to flirt with me, because my seriousness and dignity offer no encouragement. Perhaps she disagrees with me entirely, but is too polite to controvert.

I question her second edition, my daughter, about the manner, and she simply duplicates it. The girl herself has been one of the joyous perplexities of my life, and I recently learned that in several months she is to begin to mystify a husband.

My son never smiles at me, at least in my presence, and I applied to him for an opinion, but he was unable to assist in determination. He has been married for several years, and confidentially confesses that all his home hours are occupied in the study of his wife, and the subject thus far is unpromising of solution. It must be acknowledged that woman is a useful invention or institution, but what is mere man to do to obtain a full knowledge of her? Even the Subways furnish illuminated directions of trains. Why cannot women be forced to exhibit some signs of their trains of thought? Cannot a law be enacted that shall oblige them to? Oh, it's a bewildering universe, anyway. SEBASTIAN WIREWICKS.

An Odious Tariff Comparison.

The Becker trial and the baseball news pale into insignificance when compared with the information contained in a little ten-line paragraph, hidden away on an inside page, which stated that owing to the shortness of the maize crop of Spain King Alfonso had reduced the tariff on that grain, thus encouraging importation and preventing the price from becoming prohibitive.

How long, O Lord, how long will a patient and long-suffering American people submit to a rigid tariff law which prevents any such beneficial arrangement in this country?

Secretary Wilson states that there are fewer cattle in the country to-day than ten years ago, yet there are five or six million more people to eat them. What, think you, would King Alfonso do if this emergency confronted the people of his country? JAMES E. BRADLEY.

Referring to this morning's article headed "Blind Against Double Fare," it is difficult to believe that a great corporation like the Pennsylvania Railroad could be so unsympathetic and inconsiderate to the living dead as to impose upon them the necessity of paying an extra fare for a guide while riding in its cars. To my mind such a ruling is without precedent.

The blind will always find willing persons to guide and direct them in all public places and conveyances. But if the railroad insists upon a blind passenger being accompanied by a guide it should be compelled to carry the guide free of charge.

Not Enough Books.

There is a flaw in our Public Library that is more shameful than any other which has been mentioned in your columns. It is the scarcity of educational books in the circulation department on such subjects as politics, law, economics, and the natural sciences. In Boston, Springfield, Providence, and many other cities we find in those libraries a much larger circulation of books of this character than in our Public Library. Why can't we have more of those books in the circulation department? Y. L. T.

HONOR SYSTEM FOR MIDDIES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The principle that "boys will be boys" is to be recognized hereafter in the maintenance of discipline at the United States Naval Academy. Under the practice of the department and the Academy authorities for years, disciplinary measures have been enforced with a firm hand, and many a prospective Admiral has had his career nipped in the bud through indulgence in some boyish prank that was regarded as inconsistent with the bearing of an officer and a gentleman. Now, however, the plan determined upon will take cognizance of the fact that youthful spirits must have a vent ocasionally, and the youngster who gets into mischief will not be judged so harshly as the full-fledged officer of mature years.

The new method is expected to bring good results in that it will put the midshipmen on their honor to maintain the trust reposed in them. The changed condition will tend to eliminate dismissals for offenses due to youthful exuberance. Punishments such as extra guard duty and confinement to quarters and bounds will take the place of the more drastic penalties heretofore enforced.

In accordance with its determination to put this change into effect, the Navy Department will establish a post-graduate course in connection with the Academy and will make important changes in the curriculum. Announcement was made today that George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy, had approved a general order, drafted by the Bureau of Navigation, providing for the changes.

In August the department issued an order revising the curriculum so as to provide adequate sea training in place of the two years' cruise for passed midshipmen; to limit academic instruction to the requirements for turning out Ensigns in four years, leaving the higher training to be acquired in service and specialized training to post-graduate courses, and to readjust the academic course more nearly to average school conditions throughout the country. The chief purpose was to make the course more practical and thorough, and the department declares that a long step has been taken in that direction by sending the first and second class midshipmen to the fleet for their Summer practice cruise instead of to schoolships.

The new order completes and extends the arrangements begun in August. The changes eliminate world's history from the entrance examination and permit candidates for admission much more time in the examination room on all subjects. In the first year the work will be more elementary, and greater time will be allowed for English studies and foreign languages, particularly Spanish and French. Theoretical and advanced features, such as tactics, law, and constructive and designing technical work, will be eliminated or abridged, and the time thus saved will be devoted to practical matters.

The School of Marine Engineering, established in 1909, will be merged with the new post-graduate department, to which officers will be assigned in large classes. One of the principal objects of this department will be to help officers regain the habit of study and reading, which three years of sea duty following graduation from the Academy tend to break down. The semesters of the post-graduate course will be four months each, and at the end of the eight months officers who show proficiency in any special study will have a chance to follow a chosen line of specialization for about sixteen months more. Most of the officers to be assigned to the post-graduate department will be junior Lieutenants and Ensigns who have qualified for promotion to the grade of junior Lieutenant.

In explaining the objects of these changes the Navy Department says: "The interest and co-operation of educators and experts in civil life will be especially sought, in order that the student officers, the Naval Academy, and the navy generally may be brought into closer touch and keep pace with outside progress in science and technology, forming relations with persons prominent in scientific and business life of the country that should lead to a better and wider understanding of the purpose and needs of the navy and its value to the Nation."

A POLITICAL PROPHET.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your local column of to-day's issue mentioned that the betting odds are now 4 to 1 on Wilson. I have no interest in this form of gambling, but for the benefit of your readers permit me to say that from my observations these odds are preposterous.

It seems certain to me that without New York State Wilson cannot become President of the United States. I shall not pretend to speak of the rest of the State, but I will speak of one part of the State with certainty, and that is the Assembly District in which I live, the Fifteenth Assembly District of the Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

Since the campaign of 1896, I have made a peculiar and personal canvass of my own in that district. This canvass has been confined exclusively to the smaller businesses of the district, such as grocers, druggists, small dry goods merchants, fruiterers, &c.

After the Presidential nominations this year, I found, I am frank to admit, that nearly all the Democrats who had voted the Republican National ticket since 1896 now intended to vote for Wilson, and also found a few Republicans who intended to do the same. I might add that these Republicans intended to vote for Wilson to make sure that Roosevelt would be defeated.

About a month ago I again made my canvass among the same people, and found that the Republicans who had intended to vote for Wilson were, almost without exception, determined to vote for Taft. I found a few old "Gold Democrats" wavering. A few days ago I made a third canvass, and found, to my surprise, that nearly all the so-called "Gold Democrats" now intend to vote for Taft. I found that two things had caused this change: First—That Roosevelt was no longer a danger, and therefore it was not necessary to vote for Wilson, so far as the Republicans were concerned. Second—As far as the Democrats were concerned, a feeling that it would be a mistake to change on account of the tariff question.

Any one, if he inquires, will find, as I did, that the smaller business men dread a tariff change even more than the large business men. I found that the feeling had grown amazingly that it was a great mistake to change—that what was wanted was to have the country left alone; that even if a tariff bill was not passed that would be radical, a mere discussion of a change would paralyze business and hurt them more than others.

The conclusions I draw are: First—That the Fifteenth Assembly District will give a majority for Taft almost as large as it did in 1908. Second—What the Fifteenth Assembly District does is, in a large measure, indicative of what the other Republican Assembly Districts will do. Third—That the Democratic business men of every district will think and vote the same way; and lastly, that this condition must inevitably and absolutely carry the State for Taft by a very comfortable majority. PETER ZUCKER.

The news that the Justices of the United States Supreme Court allowed themselves to be distracted from the arguments that were being put before them in order to scrutinize bulletins giving the results of the baseball game for the world's championship may be taken seriously or not—according to the temper of the particular individual concerned.

At the risk of being classed with Col. Roosevelt as a critic of the Supreme Court, I humbly beg to submit to your consideration that it is extremely humiliating to note that even Supreme Court Justices occasionally behave foolishly. The argument that, after all, they are human will not do. Every good citizen expects those who sit upon the bench of the supreme tribunal of the Nation to be far above the average mortal. It is plain that any Judge who cannot concentrate his attention upon the facts or arguments submitted to him and upon nothing else, or who will not do so, does not deserve to sit in judgment upon the momentous issues of this or any other land.

Nothing could be more gratifying and encouraging to me than Prof. H. A. Todd's prompt approval in his letter to THE TIMES of my plan for the systematic Americanization of foreign patronymics. It is to philological authorities like him that we shall have to look for sound rules of adaptation and transformation if my proposal should ever take practical form, either as a society or as a public body. The establishment of both a private association and an official bureau would probably be best, the two co-operating in their work, the bureau accepting the rules laid down by the society and drawing upon it for its lists of names required.

It has been pointed out to me by one of the many persons who have expressed an interest in my plan that the great objection or, at least, difficulty, is a legal one. With our present lack of legal recognition and protection of property in family names, it is likely that the very names that are best worth protecting would continue to be appropriated by the financially successful and socially ambitious, in preference to all the assistance proffered by a patronymic society or bureau. The annexation of such honored American names by people having no right to them would, in the future as in the past, be perpetrated as often by more or less native Americans as by immigrants, in the continued absence of legal restrictions. There is another point to be considered, and that is public sentiment. Prof. Todd speaks of the incoming aliens who "have as yet scarcely developed the patronymic sense," but it has been pointed out to me that the average American seems to take the subject only slightly more seriously, if not in his own case, certainly in that of his neighbor. He is amused, rather than indignant, when he reads in his paper that some obscure immigrant with an unpronounceable name has by legal process adopted that of his friend, Mr. Blank. The news item itself is usually written in a humorous vein. Some years ago a Bostonian with a historic name courteously inquired of a resident of this city how he came to bear this honorable patronymic as a "middle name." The answer was that "one cannot stop a donkey's bray without killing the ass," and there was great merriment in the land over this neat bit of repartee.

A naturalized American friend of mine tells me that this appropriation of good old American names by all kinds and conditions of aliens is nothing but belated retribution for the annexation of good old European names by immigrants of earlier generations. He himself feels deeply on the subject, since his own patronymic has been "stolen," as he expresses it, by an American with not a shadow of a right to it. But Europe will have to look out for itself, and does so by refusing to recognize all claims to relationship made by Americans, unless supported by unimpeachable genealogical proof.

That it is high time to regulate our patronymic muddle has become clear to me in the course of my study of the subject. Of course, even the enactment of the necessary laws would but imperfectly stop this deplorable condition of affairs in the still fluid state of our population, which makes it supremely easy for people to lose and change their identity by merely moving from one part of the country to another. Still, the existence of such laws would at least serve as a deterrent, and in flagrant cases would make justice possible. That public sentiment among the mass of Americans needs quickening cannot, however, be doubted. For that purpose, as well as for the primary one of providing the alien with patronymics that he can truly and honestly call his own, a patronymic society might prove of great service, especially if, as Prof. Todd suggests, the nucleus of its membership were to be made up of the "most broad-minded elements in our existing historic, patriotic and genealogical societies," men and women of "clear insight into the genuine values of social evolution."

In this letter, as in my first one, I have purposely laid stress on the perplexities and difficulties in the path of such a society, on the extent of its scope of activity, as contrasted with the simpler service of an official bureau, whose task would be confined to the converting of unpronounceable foreign names into approximately American ones.

Prof. Todd's assurance of encouragement in the "precarious task" of founding such a society leads me to invite those willing to join me in the attempt, if at first only for the purpose of aiding the naturalized American in Americanizing his name in such a way that at least part of it may be preserved and carried along from the past in the Old World into the future in the New. Telegraphers Amend Their Poll.

The poll this morning showing that nobody in THE TIMES telegraph department favored Roosevelt places several Bull Moosers in that department in the wrong light. Two of us were fishing, one was out campaigning, and still another was taking his night off when the poll was taken. Record it four for Roosevelt, at least, please.

O Christabel, brave Christabel!
Whose e'er the fault, whose e'er the blame
Not once shall men reproach thy name,
For thou it was and thou alone
Who safely dodged the London "bobs,"
Who all believed were on their jobs.

We've oft been told—if true or no—
That women robed as martyrs wait
But Valor led thee not astray,

O Christabel, brave Christabel!
From foreign realm thy voice we hear;

THIS IS NO LAND FOR VOCAL DEBUTS

YET WE KNOW GOOD MUSIC

He Made This Mistake, He Says, but His Daughter Shan't — His Son's Debut Next Month.

When the seventeen-year-old daughter of Giuseppe Campanari, the Italian baritone, makes her début in the theatre, it is not to be in New York, according to her father, but somewhere in Europe.

"It is too bad that it must be so," he said. "But there is no other way. My daughter was born in this country. She is an American, and she should sing here first, but it is not possible, although she has one of the great voices of the age. Such facility, such execution, it is perfection! and she is but 17. She sings the airs of the Queen of the Night from 'The Magic Flute' in the original key, and you know how high the second air is. And then she sings more dramatic music, like Leonora in 'Trovatore.'

"But she must not sing here first; that cannot be. It is strange that no one is accepted here, no matter how great he may be, until he has sung abroad and won success. Even then his success must be made here, but in that case it is easier.

"I cannot understand it. You have had the greatest artists in the world here for many years; you are given the chance to hear the best singing, and know what the best singing is, and yet you cannot make up your mind about an artist at once.

"Look at Tamagno. He was a shoe maker's apprentice. Some one discovered that he had a voice. He sang in opera, and immediately in Italy he became the great Tamagno. If he had made his début here it would have taken many years to have become the great Tamagno, and yet there was the voice; it was there in the beginning; he must have had as good a voice or better in the beginning than he had later.

"I do not understand this trait in the American public, but it exists. I have several pupils, American girls, who would like to make their débute in their native country. But it can't be done. There is no place for them here until they have made a success abroad.

The Welcome Is Lukewarm.

"And, as I say, even then things aren't easy. An artist comes here and he must conquer his way with the public and press. At first his welcome is lukewarm; but in a year or two he obtains what position he may have. Take the case of Amato. His reception during his first season here was not of the warmest, but now he is regarded as a great singer here. He was the same singer when he first arrived.

"Then the critics here occupy a strong position. Their word is law. In Italy it is not so. The press may be all unfavorable, but if the public likes an artist it does not matter. Here, if the press is unfavorable, in spite of the fact that the public likes the artist, he is doomed. For each man or woman who goes to the opera reads what his favorite critic says about the matter in the morning, and if the judgment is unfavorable the reader sighs and says, 'I don't know. This man is right. He knows.'

"There are some men, especially, who know how to shoot out the poisoned darts, one a week, just enough to kill the victim slowly. This week, 'his voice is a little worn;' the next week, 'his voice now betrays a tremolo;' the third, 'he forced his tones,' and so on—all perfectly true, doubtless, and voila, there lies the singer dead.'

"I am 52 years old, and shall probably never sing again at the opera here, but I want my daughter to make none of the mistakes that I have made. I came to this country when I was very young from Milan, where I had sung a little. I had also learned to play the 'cello. I was advised by a friend to come to America to make my fortune. I had the bad luck to land in Boston, and it soon became evident that I could find nothing to do there with my voice. But with my 'cello I succeeded in gaining a position with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and I played with that organization, under Gericke and Nikisch, for eight years. Whenever I spoke of my voice people said I was crazy.

Damrosch His Benefactor.

"Well, at last I persuaded Walter Damrosch to hear me, and he engaged me for a Sunday night concert with his orchestra at Carnegie Hall. My success was enormous, and I was engaged for eight more successive concerts. They asked Damrosch where he had found me, and he said that I was just over from Italy, that he had met me on a boat. I was then engaged for a cheap opera company, and sang 'Pagliacci' in Twenty-third Street.

"One night when I was singing with a company in Philadelphia Grau and the great tenor Capoul heard me. Grau offered me a position at the Metropolitan Opera House. I was to sing five times a week, and was to receive $100 a week. The company I was with was paying me $250 a week, but the new position offered more opportunities, and I took it. For ten years after that I sang with the Metropolitan Opera Company, and during the four succeeding seasons I sang some performances there, but I made a mistake. I never appeared in Europe. One Summer I was to have sung at Covent Garden, but I contracted hay fever and could not.

"My friends all advised me to sing abroad. They said that it was wrong to make only an American career, that the public liked new faces and new voices and that I should go somewhere else for a while and sing. But I did not heed them. I sang my performances, I received my tributes, and they were many, and then returned to my home and my children and my spaghetti. I was happy and had no heed for the future. Now, here I am, at 52, utterly unknown abroad, and no longer a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company. And there is Battistini, at 64, still singing beautifully in Italy.

"My daughter shall make no such mistake. She shall have her training abroad. Toscanini says that she will be the greatest of singers. I have a son, too, who has a voice. He is a tenor and he is only 23. He will make his début at Montreal next month, singing 'La Bohème' with Mme. Carmen-Melis."

It had been the intention of the reporter to interview Mr. Campanari, who is famous for his sense of humor and the pranks he used to play, on the humors of the opera, but the baritone's mood seemed to preclude that. Still, he told two amusing stories.

Hoodwinking the Critic Clan.

"I was singing in Portland, Ore," he said, "with Marie Rappold, Josephine Jacoby, and Riccardo Martin. We were singing the quartet from 'Marta,' when suddenly I began to change the words, always, of course, sticking to Italian. Mme. Jacoby understood some of the things I said and began to laugh; Mrs. Rappold followed suit, and soon Martin began to laugh heartily, too. I was the only one who kept a straight face. We began to believe that the audience would hiss us off the stage. Nothing of the sort occurred, however. There was loud applause, and the next day several of the papers said that the laughing quartet from 'Marta' was the success of the evening!

"One night under Seidl I appeared as Kothner in 'Die Meistersinger.' Now, that character has nothing to do after the first act but to come in at the end of the music drama, carrying a banner. I didn't want to wait around all the evening for this, and I told Seidl so.

"'Ah, but,' he said, 'think of the master. Wagner would not like it to have that part taken by a supernumerary in the last act.'

"Seidl thought a moment, and then he said, 'I'll tell you what I'll do. If you'll stay, I shall have a supper sent to your room.'

"He was as good as his word. When I left the stage after the first act I went to my dressing room and found a supper there with champagne and a box of cigars. I ate the supper, drank the champagne, changed my clothes, put the cigars into my pockets, and went home.

"They are reviving 'The Magic Flute' at the Opera. That reminds me of the old days when we gave the work in Italian. It took an interminable time to make the various changes of scenery, and while they were being made I would pursue Dippel through the dark, from one side of the stage to the other, calling 'Tamino! Tamino!'

"I see that Mme. Sembrich and Mme. Gadski are engaged in an active discussion about the art of bel canto singing. No singer should be able to say whether singing was greater in one period or another. Only the public can decide that."

DEDICATE JEWISH HOME FOR ORPHANS

GAYNOR PRAISES NEW PLAN

Homes in the Country Where Children Will Learn Trades Far Superior to City Institutions, He Declares.

The new cottage homes of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society of New York were dedicated yesterday afternoon at Pleasantville in Westchester County. Some 600 prominent Jews of this city were carried to Pleasantville on a special train which departed from the Grand Central Station at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and returned at 6 o'clock in the evening. Several hundred persons from Pleasantville and its vicinity also attended the exercises.

On a tract of land 200 acres in extent and half a mile to the east of the railroad station twenty-nine new buildings, of which seventeen are cottages, have been erected to take the place of the old home of the society at Broadway and 150th Street in this city. The new buildings were ready for use some three months ago. Eight hundred orphans have been taken there.

These boys and girls, dressed neatly but plainly, were drawn up at attention in the quadrangle of the main building, each waving an American flag, as the long line of visitors filed up the path from the station. The children greeted the visitors with cheers, and the boys' band of the institution played "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the National flag was unfurled from the staff in the quadrangle. The visitors then mingled with the children and praised them for their neat appearance. The men and women guests of the institution, most of whom had contributed generously toward the establishment of the new home, then inspected the buildings and grounds. Later luncheon was served in the administration building. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the company gathered in the auditorium for the dedication exercises.

Key Turned Over to Mr. Lewisohn.

The Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes began the ceremonies with prayer, and the Chairman, Adolph Lewisohn, President of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, then introduced Joseph L. Buttenwieser, Chairman of the Building Committee, who presented to Mr. Lewisohn the key of the new institution.

"On behalf of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society and of the entire community," said Mr. Lewisohn, "I accept the key of this new asylum, and in doing so I wish to thank you, Mr. Buttenwieser as Chairman of the Building Committee and the other members of the board for the great work that has now been carried successfully to completion. This is, indeed, the happiest moment of my life, and I congratulate all who have so nobly helped in the building of this great institution."

Mr. Lewisohn recalled the services that his brother, the late Leonard Lewisohn, had contributed to the institution. He said that much credit was due to the Vice President of the society, Samuel D. Levy, who was one of the earliest advocates of the cottage plan, and who had served the institution faithfully for twenty-five years. Among those who helped with the plans for the new cottages, he said, were Judge Nathan Bijur, Nathaniel Myers, Homer Folks, Charles D. Hilles, and Dr. Edward Devine.

"In carrying out this plan," Mr. Lewisohn declared, "we believe we have acted for the best interests of the children who are or will be under the care of this institution, as well as for the interests of the community at large. We trust and hope that this new asylum will be a model for other similar institutions."

The asylum's choir of boys and girls then sang, and Mr. Lewisohn introduced Mayor Gaynor, who had motored to Pleasantville to participate in the exercises. In presenting the Mayor, Mr. Lewisohn said:

"There is a man among us who has to attend to the affairs of 5,000,000 persons, who is held responsible for anything that may go wrong with them, and who gets very little thanks if things go right. There you have the Mayor of the City of New York. Now, if under these circumstances Mayor Gaynor comes here today, and gives up his Sunday to join us in this celebration, we ought to appreciate it and we do appreciate it."

"This large audience," began Mayor Gaynor, "coming such a long distance attests sufficiently, if that were necessary, the interest which the Jews in New York take in helping and caring for their own poor and unfortunate. When the first handful of Jews landed in New York in their little ship, Peter Stuyvesant was Mayor, and he would not allow them to land until they gave bond that they would not become a charge on the community, and that they would take care of their widows and orphans. And that is what you have been doing ever since and doing well. The Jews from the remotest antiquity took care of the widows and orphans.

City Not for Children, Mayor Says.

"I congratulate you upon moving out here into the country. I join in the wish that this experiment may be so successful that all orphan societies of the city will move to the country, and the further out the better. The worst place in the world to bring up a child is in the city, and especially in a large city. In the congested districts of the city the problem is what to do with the children. Why, some people hate to see them on the streets at all. Where do they expect them to be?"

Mayor Gaynor said that he was glad to learn that the children were to be taught useful occupations, as without them he declared the orphans were in danger of becoming criminals. He commended the plans for agricultural instruction, and said he should like to see the Sheltering Society acquire a thousand acres of land, divided into little farms, with herds of cattle covering the hillsides.

"I was also glad to hear from the Chairman of the Building Committee," he continued, "that while the boys and girls here would be taught to be steadfast Jews, they would also be taught to be good Americans. That was worth hearing, but it is nothing new to us. We all know that these are your sentiments, the same as the sentiments of other nationalities coming here. To be a true American means to adopt the American system of government freely and fully. It means to vote according to your convictions. Any nationality in this country which votes, as a clan, or hangs together on Election Day, does the worst thing possible. It must be said to your honor, as a fact and not as a flattery, that up to this time in this country, and that means that it is to continue, you have been fairly well divided among the political parties of this country. You have not voted except on high political principles, uninfluenced by anything else."

Mayor Gaynor declared that he did not believe that the charities ought all to be taken over by the city. The pittance which the city gave for public charity, he said, made it all the harder for private institutions to obtain money by subscriptions.

Samuel D. Levy, Vice President of the Sheltering Society, then told of his early work on behalf of the orphan asylum, and Borough President McAneny said the city would become a partner with the Sheltering Society in its work. Jacob H. Schiff congratulated Mr. Lewisohn and his associates on the new cottage homes.

"Let us open our pocketbooks and contribute to the support of this institution," said Mr. Schiff. "We must take care of our own, for 250 years ago we were admitted into this costly town with the distinct understanding that our poor should be taken care of. Thus far great numbers of our people have come into this, the greatest Jewish city in the world. If the city is not going to take over charities, and we do not want it to, then we must be liberal and open our pocketbooks."

Among the other speakers were Village President Charles Bell of Pleasantville, Robert W. Hebberd, Secretary of the State Board of Charities; Commissioner of Charities Michael J. Drummond, Louis Marshall, and the Rev. Dr. Henry M. Leipziger. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman offered the closing prayer.

MR. SPALDING'S RECITAL.

The First Offering of the Concert Season by the Young American Artist.

Mr. Albert Spalding, who was the first musician to present himself this season to the New York concert audiences, secured no very dense throng of listeners at his concert yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. Nor could it be expected that he would, even though it were his "only New York recital," with October still so young and offering so alluring an aspect outside of concert halls. Mr. Spalding is still young; but in the few years since he returned to his native country he has shown a steady progress, a steady artistic ripening that has been a cause of gratification to those who have watched his progress. He is in earnest, and he has the root of the matter in him; and if he is not quite ready yet to read his title clear to being "the great American violinist," as the programme styled him, he is an artist who has already much to say for himself.

His playing yesterday showed refined and delicate musical feeling; and there were in it a greater warmth of tone and a greater technical security than have hitherto been noticeable in it. It showed, indeed, finish and delicacy and, especially in music of a lesser mold, fine taste and sense of proportion. It might be doubted whether these qualities did not predominate somewhat to the exclusion of force and vigor in certain places where they were needed; for the sonata in D by Corelli with which Mr. Spalding began might have had more breadth and amplitude, and Mr. Spalding still fails to reach and show forth all there is of Olympian grandeur and repose in the chaconne from Bach's D minor solo sonata. And yet in each of these there was much that was finely felt and truly musical in its exposition, as there was in Beethoven's Romance in G. Chausson's "Le Poème" Mr. Spalding did not succeed in making as interesting as it might be made. It needs, moreover, all the help it can get from the color and variety of the orchestral background, which loses much when set for the piano. The piece is baffling in its length and discursiveness, even to those who admire the beauty of its ballad-like opening, its eloquent harmony, its picturing of mood. Mr. Spalding caught a good deal, if not all, of the Gallic grace and elegance of Saint-Saëns's Rondo Capriccioso—if only there had been a little more spirit, a little more verve.

He claimed attention as a composer, a "Prelude," a "Scherzo Giocoso," a "Romance," a "Musical Period," a "Siciliano" were the titles of the pieces he put forward. They showed a more or less graceful fancy, intelligence in exploiting the technique of the violin, some skill in the treatment of diminutive musical ideas; but also a prevailing restlessness of harmony, and they did not seem to indicate that Mr. Spalding had anything musical of much significance to say for its own sake.

MME. BESSON'S NEW SKETCH.

"Found Out" an Interesting Playlet and Well Performed.

Mme. Besson, who has been seen here in several important dramatic pieces, gave the first performance of a new sketch, "Found Out," at Keith's Union Square Theatre yesterday afternoon. The play, interesting and well performed, concerns a woman who is tempted to a first theft. The woman is the wife of a young man who does not earn enough to give her the fine clothes she desires. In a hairdressing establishment she sees a purse lying on a table and takes it. It contains a large sum of money and a rosary that identifies it. She comes home full of fear, and when her husband arrives she lies about the time of her arrival. The husband finally discovers the money and learns of her theft. Then he decides to take the blame upon himself, and when a detective calls he is about to confess that it is he who has stolen the purse. At that moment the woman's mother telephones to say that she has suffered the loss of a purse containing the money and a rosary. The detective is made to believe the woman has found the property and recognized it, and the little play ends happily.

Mme. Besson as the wife had an opportunity to display considerable emotional ability, and she was well supported by the men playing the rôles of the husband and the detective.

BROADWAY WATCHES AGED HOUSES BURN

OLD SIGNS AMUSE THRONG

The anachronistic row of old wooden houses on the north side of Fortieth Street, just east of Broadway, barely escaped being wiped out yesterday evening through a lively blaze which succeeded in destroying Nos. 127 and 129 before the firemen got it under control.

The five houses that make up the row are mostly occupied by tradesmen connected in various ways with the theatrical world. No. 127, where the fire started in the back shed, was the home of Dr. A. C. French, a well-known veterinarian and dog fancier, and Salvatore Carillo, a theatrical tailor. The fire was discovered simultaneously by Yvonne Mingot, the daughter of a leather worker next door, and by some half dozen of Dr. French's dogs in the back yard. Miss Mingot screamed and the dogs barked, and an alarm followed. Three of the dogs, which were valued at several hundred dollars, perished in the flames, and more than $3,000 worth of merchandise was destroyed.

The other dogs found their way somehow to the street and were cared for by neighbors with as much solicitude as if they had been human. Carillo and French were not at home.

When the fireman arrived the flames were leaping far above the roof top, and lighted up the quaint signs on the old buildings that had hung for so long a time. At No. 129, where V. Mingot or Paris had his leather shop, two big signs flanked the side of the house. One reads:

"I can refer you by permission to many of the best dogs in the city to whom my work has given perfect satisfaction."

These signs were saved from the flames. A half-hour's strenuous work and the danger was removed. But not before the firemen had ripped the backs from all five wooden structures and breathed a sigh of regret that the entire row, destined some day to turn to kindling wood, had not been fated to burn up on so windless and temperate a night.

Mills, the commander, made a speech in French, thanking them for their labors.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Four of the central banking institutions of Europe, the Banks of England, of France, of Belgium, and of Sweden, advanced their minimum rates of discount last week. This forward movement in the foreign bank rates stands out as the most striking of the purely financial events of the week, but there was much else both at home and abroad to attract the attention of the market and to sway, in varying degree the drift of financial and business sentiment. Events abroad swayed the markets between satisfaction because of the treaty of peace between Italy and Turkey, and of apprehension over the possible effects of the war movement in the Balkans, which last week extended to most of the States in that region. The disturbance of the foreign markets, which accompanied, although it was not entirely due to, the fears which the Balkan situation aroused, reached its culmination a week ago last Saturday, when there was a holiday in our own market. Public securities, including those of England and France, particularly the latter, were under great pressure and sold at new low prices. A condition amounting to demoralization existed in the markets for many securities, particularly those in which as at Paris there had been an overextended speculation. The situation when our own market reopened at the beginning of last week was one which might well have led to a serious degree of market apprehension, but the event proved that Europe had little floating supply of American stocks still to sell, and so our own market last week, after having taken over the previous fortnight probably 400,000 shares of American stocks from Europe, was under relatively little pressure from abroad. The European markets, by reason of the decisive steps taken for their own protection and because of the establishment of the long-hoped-for peace between Italy and Turkey, recovered themselves, and throughout the balance of the week, notwithstanding the spread of hostilities in Southeastern Europe, maintained a calm attitude. There prevailed, however, as was natural, some irregularity and hesitation after the first recovery from the previous week's sharp decline. And this attitude of calm was maintained notwithstanding the advances made in the bank rates. These were partly made in response to a feeling of caution engendered by the admitted possibilities of the Balkan situation, but to an even larger degree were they the result of the general forward tendency which has prevailed in the money markets of the world owing to the great volume of business which is being done by all the principal industrial countries of the world.

Not the least interesting fact connected with what was happening in the European money market last week was the development of an easier tone in the Berlin market, where the bank rate was not advanced, and where, indeed, open market rates fell back below the 4½ per cent. bank rate. The course of the exchanges, moreover, indicated that, thanks to favorable movements in its foreign trade, Germany had very satisfactorily recovered from the strained conditions which previously had made necessary foreign borrowings on a large scale. It is perhaps too much to hope that Germany may escape the effect of the conditions which have brought the English Bank rate up to 5 per cent. and the French Bank rate to 3½ per cent., but the action of the German market this past week was an agreeable surprise in view of the extent of the demands which Berlin had made this past year on other financial centres. There is no disposition here to minimize the importance of the situation which has now developed in Southeastern Europe, but it is recognized by our bankers, and the fact has been borne in upon them by the private advices which they have received from their bank associates in Europe, that the European political situation is far less strained than it was in September of last year, when the fear of international complications was the dominant influence in the money and securities markets. Now such fears are far in the background, and are but a minor factor in shaping the course of financial events. The increase in the English Bank rate to 5 per cent. was expected long before the Balkan situation became at all threatening, and the firmness which our own money market has shown for many weeks offers confirmation, if any be needed, of the fact that active trade, and, in our own case, exceptionally bountiful harvests, are the underlying cause of the relatively high price which is being paid for money.

From many sides comes confirmation of the steady growth in trade at home and abroad, which is the underlying factor in the present general financial situation. Under the pressure of increasing traffic the shortage of freight cars reported by the railways of the United States has been increasing, bank clearings have been mounting higher and higher, and in such formal records of our trade as that presented in the monthly statement of our foreign commerce for September is seen the steady growth of commercial activity. That statement showed that a new high record was reached for the month as well as for the nine months of the calendar year in both imports and exports. We had up to the close of last month gained only a relatively small advantage from the export of the surplus of this year's bountiful crops, but the grain movement nevertheless reached sufficient proportions to suggest the important part which increased agricultural exports will probably play in our foreign trade for the balance of this year and for the early months of next. How large our surplus crop production this year will be cannot yet be definitely estimated, but careful study of the crop situation by commercial organizations, which are peculiarly well equipped to make such estimates, indicates that the wheat and corn crops will even exceed the bountiful promises of the last Government report. It would have been rash in the extreme at the beginning of the agricultural season, which is now drawing toward a close, to have counted on crops as good as those which we have been and are now harvesting. If the uncertainties of the Presidential election have seemed in nowise to retard the movement of trade, it is to the extraordinarily favorable agricultural situation that we must look for the chief explanation.

Our own stock market last week pursued an uncertain course. It had for many weeks, up to the end of September, been discounting the crop and business situation, which is now so fully unfolding itself, and so substantial was the foundation which those conditions provided for improvement in the prices of securities that they were but little shaken by the enormous inflow of stocks from abroad. It was plain, however, that having absorbed this stock the market was under the influence of secondary liquidation of much of the stock thus suddenly put into the market, and that, moreover, it was moving under the influence of certain other factors making for temporary uncertainty. Thus the reconvening of the Supreme Court, carrying with it the possibility of early decisions in important cases in which the financial community is deeply interested including the anthracite, the Union Pacific, and several railroad rate cases, created a new factor capable of causing hesitation. To-day, again, there is a possibility of decisions in some of these cases, and they will now be looked for from week to week until the court has announced its decision in these several cases. The fact that we are now within two weeks of the National elections may also become a restraining factor, though the indifference which the market has shown to politics may, perhaps, last even until the die is cast. Discussion of the probable earnings of the United States Steel Corporation for the September quarter, the report for which will be issued a week from to-morrow, will become more active as the week advances, and may very reasonably be expected to play a part of some importance in this week's market movements. What this quarterly statement will reveal has not yet been reliably indicated, but it is almost certain to make a favorable showing, compared with the earlier quarters of the year.

So far as our own money situation is concerned, there is no disagreement among bankers that we have to expect a continuance of firm rates, although there is some difference of opinion as to whether or not any higher rates than those which we have already had will be experienced later in the Fall. What appears very clearly is that the money market is traveling on a very close margin, and it will not be cause for surprise if temporary periods of firmness greater than that which now prevails should occur between now and the culmination of the crop movement. It is possible, however, that the demands in the various sections of the country will so adjust themselves as to prevent the putting of any increased strain upon the money market. It appears that interior banks are borrowing in New York to a larger extent than at any time since 1907, but already the banks in some sections have begun to pay off these loans as money comes to them through the marketing of the crops. The comforting feature of the relatively firm money situation is that it has arisen from growing trade rather than from any other cause.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE

LONDON CALM IN CRISIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The general opinion is that, financially, the Balkan hostilities have spent their influence.

Now that war is declared, the city is taking stock of the situation calmly. London dealers kept their heads throughout and withstood the flood of selling orders from the Continent, and it was fortunate that London was in a sound and healthy position to face the trouble.

The British investor was wide awake, and those with money to spare hastened to obtain bargains, but some substantial losses were incurred in the slump by dealers who found themselves saddled with doubtful stock. These losses have to be reckoned with, but, inasmuch as the losers have some days in which to right themselves, it is hoped that failures will be averted.

The Sunday Times says the leading feature of the market has been the strength shown by Americans, adding: "Whether they deserve higher quotations than those now ruling is a question on which opinion differs, but all judges agree that the confidence shown by Wall Street in its own securities and the promptness with which all offers of stocks have been taken foreshadow a further rise in Yankees unless unforeseen developments supervene. How large the purchases by Wall Street were may be gleaned from the fact that a single boat left our shores for New York with £4,000,000 [$20,000,000] in American securities."

QUICK RECOVERY IN PARIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—The panic of eight days ago was followed by a movement of such a reactionary character that the volume of business transacted last Monday was unique in the annals of the Bourse. The purchases are estimated to have exceeded $10,000,000.

Although the extraordinary rallying movement somewhat calmed down toward the end of the week, it is evident that operators now regard the situation from a judicial and calm standpoint.

The Bourse believes that the Balkan conflict will be localized, and the report that the powers are contemplating an international conference to preserve the status quo, whatever be the issues of the war, was another factor exercising a reassuring influence which tended to impart firmness to the whole market.

The fortnightly settlement, which was regarded with much apprehension, passed off with surprising easiness, contango rates being lower than even the most optimistic dared to hope. No failure was recorded, owing, no doubt, to the assistance given by financial houses, which helped in every way to tide over the crisis.

The market appears now all the better for the slump and consequent rally, practically all securities being on the upward grade. Rio Tinto, however, which stock was one of the first to recover, closed yesterday 23 francs below Friday's price.

The raising of the Bank of England's rate had no effect, as it had been discounted.

BERLIN BOERSE STRONGER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—Although the week witnessed the beginning of hostilities in the Balkans, the Boerse was notably stronger than at any period since the Near Eastern crisis began. The conclusion of Turkish-Italian peace and the persuasive official assurances that Europe would not be embroiled in the Balkan war were factors which enabled the market to recover its composure.

Coincident with these factors was strong intervention by the great banks, which had the desired effect of buoying up the market and arresting the decline. All issues closed yesterday substantially higher than a week previously.

Berlin prides itself on having weathered the storms of the last three weeks on the whole better than other European markets.

OIL DECREE WORKS, SAYS WICKERSHAM

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Attorney General Wickersham retorted to-day on Col. Roosevelt for his assertion that the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company had accomplished nothing. Mr. Wickersham quoted Frank B. Kellogg, who was Special Government Prosecutor of Standard Oil under the Roosevelt Administration, as declaring that Col. Roosevelt's allegation "was wide of the truth." In a formal statement he issued to-day the Attorney General included a letter from C. D. Chamberlain, Secretary and General Counsel of the National Petroleum Association, in which Mr. Chamberlain said that the business of the independent oil concerns had improved greatly, and that monopoly had ceased to exist since the dissolution decree went into effect in May, 1911. Mr. Wickersham described Mr. Chamberlain's organization as "an association of a very large number of independent refining companies not connected with the Standard Oil Company and its subsidiaries."

"This letter, coming from a representative of those companies which were most injuriously affected by the Standard Oil combination," said Mr. Wickersham, "affords very strong corroboration of the views which have been expressed by the Attorney General and by Mr. Kellogg of the effect of the decision in the Standard Oil case, and affords a very conclusive answer to the superficial condemnation which has been so recklessly indulged in by political opponents of the administration."

The Attorney General quoted from an address delivered by Mr. Kellogg before the American Bar Association at Milwaukee last August, when Mr. Kellogg said:

> I believe absolutely in the justice, in the soundness, and in the economic necessity of the decisions in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases. * * * The judgment * * * put an end to all the long list of unfair methods of competition used for the purpose of crushing out and destroying competition; it severed the holding company, separated the subsidiary corporations, and prohibited them from being thereafter managed as one harmonious whole, and thereby deprived them of the power to control the commerce of the country. To the smaller corporations and individuals engaged in the busines it brought protection from the control and domination of the great combination, and to-day the independent manufacturer in the oil industry is enjoying the right to engage in business with a fair opportunity to compete.

Mr. Chamberlain's letter to the Attorney General was in response to a letter from Mr. Wickersham, written, the latter said, "for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the independent dealers," as to present condition of the oil business, contrasted with its condition prior to the decree of May, 1911. In his communication Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The effect of the Government's prosecution of the Standard Oil combination began practically with the filing of that suit in November, 1906, and from that date the practices of the Standard Oil combination in large measure ceased to be predatory, and the independent dealers began to have a chance to live.

"This condition continuously improved during the pendency of the Government's suit, and that improvement has continued since the decree of dissolution, so that it may be safely stated that the giving of rebates, upon which the Standard Oil monopoly was built up, has ceased, preferential rates are few and far between, disclosure of information by carriers of competitive shippers is no longer practical, price cutting below cost to kill competition is rare, and many other unethical commercial practices have become so infrequent as hardly to cause complaint. Now, however, the independent manufacturer and refiner of oil is able to conduct his business with a fair share of profit reasonably due him, and without the fearful handicap under which he labored before the Government's suit was brought.

"In 1906 returns from the oil industry showed that the Standard Oil combination controlled about 84 per cent. of the entire oil business of the United States and the remaining 16 per cent. was distributed among the independent companies. The most accurate data which I have been able to secure show that at the present time the independent companies control 34 per cent., exclusive of California, where, I am informed, the independents control nearly 60 per cent.

"CORN BELT" SALE RUMORED

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Emphatic denial was made to-night by President Samuel M. Felton of the Chicago Great Western Railroad that that road would be absorbed by the Grand Trunk system. Rumors to this effect have been current in Minneapolis and Chicago for several days.

No negotiations between the controlling interests of either road were in progress, Mr. Felton declared. He contradicted the statement that the Great Western was not making a profit, and that its finances had been impaired.

Mr. Felton would not discuss the reported plan of Charles M. Hayes, former President of the Canadian system, who sank with the Titanic, for the acquisition of the Chicago Great Western line. He says also that he knows nothing of the negotiations that E. J. Chamberlin, successor to Mr. Hayes, is reported to have entered into with J. P. Morgan & Co., a majority controlling the Chicago Great Western stock.

In railroad circles it is no secret that the Grand Trunk system is ambitious to acquire a line tapping the rich producing territory of the Central West. Spurred on by keen competition with the Canadian Pacific, it is known to be exerting every effort in this direction.

Charles Steele of J. P. Morgan & Co., who is a Director of the Chicago Great Western, was not accessible last night, but a banker who is usually informed about the affairs of the road said that he had heard nothing of its impending purchase by the Grand Trunk, and was inclined to discredit the Chicago story.

A 6% BOND, well secured as to principal, amply protected as to interest, and yielding over 5.90% on the investment, is fully described in our circular No. 228. Copy will be furnished upon request.

The Investor Who Seeks Security

Above all else is usually a buyer of bonds. These bonds must be secured by property of substantial value; there must be a liberal excess of earnings over interest requirements. Furthermore, the income rate should be sufficient to ensure a steady demand that will maintain the market price or cause it to increase.

Conservatism

It matters little how successful we may be in other directions in rearing a promising financial structure by rapid growth or in making large profits.

Safety should be the one controlling factor that governs our actions, and in our opinion safety and ability to convert assets are inseparable.

WHEAT IN SUSPENSE OVER BALKAN WAR

CORN AND OATS SLUGGISH

Cotton Runs an Even Course Between Growing Demand and Continuing Warm Weather.

The week just passed opened with a rush to cover speculative shorts and shorts against cash property, owing to the serious possibilities in the Balkan region and apprehension of a general disturbance in Southeastern Europe. As the week advanced the trade became confident that the warlike conditions would be localized, and that the great powers would not be involved in the difficulties. Although actual hostilities broke out, the situation at the close of the week showed that so far the trouble had been confined to the smaller powers and Turkey, and the action of the European markets on Saturday, as well as the American, did not create any apprehension of extending trouble. The markets of Europe gradually resumed their normal, and the buying by Europe of American cash wheat, which was somewhat more active at the opening of the week, became comparatively limited toward the close.

As long as the situation in the Balkans continues as serious as it is at present, there is a grave possibility that the trouble may extend and involve one or more of the great powers. This is likely to restrict operations in the contract markets and also make shippers comparatively conservative. The possibility of the closing of the Dardanelles is always before the market, although unless the situation becomes more complicated such contingency is not likely to occur. The closing of the Dardanelles this year would be a rather serious one for Western Europe, owing to the fact that Russia has a large surplus of wheat for shipment. The shipments of wheat from Russia so far this year have been 31,108,000 bushels, against 17,048,000 last year, and from the Danube 18,536,000 bushels, against 23,712,000 bushels. The total shipments from Russia are 23,000,000 bushels less than in 1910, when the crop was estimated as smaller than the present year. A cable on Saturday morning gave a revised statement of the Winter wheat crop of Russia as 240,000,000 bushels, against 189,000,000 bushels last year, and rye, 900,000,000 bushels, against 751,000,000 bushels. The preliminary figures of the Spring wheat crop made a grand total for the Russian crop over 200,000,000 bushels in excess of a year ago. Western Europe naturally is depending very greatly on the supplies from Russia this year owing to the big crop.

The possibilities of supplies from other sections of the world not likely to be involved in the European difficulty indicate large shipments from the season. The official estimate of the Argentine new crop area is 16,964,000 acres, against 17,110,000 acres last year. An average yield per acre of, say, 12 bushels, would give an Argentine crop of 250,000,000 bushels and an export surplus materially larger than the surplus this year. The Argentine shipments so far this season have been 92,000,000 bushels, against 83,140,000 bushels last year. The shipments for the two and a half months of the crop year to Jan. 1 will easily bring the exports up to 100,000,000 bushels. The prospects for the Argentine crop are good, and, unless the weather proves unfavorable, heavy shipments will begin from the Argentine in late January or February.

The situation in North America shows a larger surplus than anticipated eariler in the season, and this larger surplus from America is not to be overlooked in sizing up the situation. The last Government estimate pointed to a total crop in the United States of 720,000,000 bushels. This is using the August figures on Winter wheat, which are 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels less than the general run of the private estimates of the Winter wheat crop. If 15,000,000 bushels is added to the Government estimate of the Winter wheat crop it would give a grand total of 735,000,000 bushels for the total out-turn, while the home consumption for 95,000,000 people, plus the seed for the new crop, would mean total home requirements of about 575,000,000 bushels, giving an apparent surplus of 160,000,000 bushels. It is probable that the reserves will be added to, however, and if the reserves are raised to 100,000,000 bushels it would still give an export surplus of over 125,000,000 bushels against about 79,000,000 bushels actually shipped the past year.

The shipments of American wheat for the month of September was quite large, the result of heavy sales at the beginning of the season before the freight rates were advanced to a prohibitive figure. The total shipments during September were 16,948,000 buushels of wheat and flour, and the shipments for the three months have been 28,829,000 bushels, against 25,201,000 bushels last year. Recently, however, the sales of American wheat have been much restricted, due partly to previous large purchases by importing Europe, and also to the tremendous advance in ocean freights, which have risen 200 to 300 per cent., and are now at record quotations for recent years. Large freight engagements in anticipation of movement of grain have been made, and additional room is difficult to get. Exporters have anticipated not only a large movement of American wheat, but a big movement of Canadian wheat, and in the Winter a large movement of American corn.

The movement of Canadian wheat is expected to be very heavy. In round figures the exports of Canadian wheat for the year ended Oct. 1 were about 103,000,000 bushels. The Canadian crop is estimated this year about the same as last, and there is every indication of possible export movement as large as last year. The prospects of the enormous movement of Canadian wheat and the tremendous possibilities in the Canadian Northwest for wheat production make the movement in favor of the creation of a contract market at the seaboard in Manitoba wheat a very important one. Canadians predict a remarkable extension in the Canadian wheat production in the next few years, and a seaboard market would be a tremendous factor in the export movement of this wheat.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—The movement of corn values during the week has been small and the action of the market tends to show a lack of definite opinion as to the effect of the large American crops on forward deliveries. Confidence that there will be an enormous demand for the new corn at the opening of the season, the same as has been the case in wheat and oats, has tended to restrict speculative selling. Weather conditions in the main have been favorable for the curing of the new corn. Some rain developed Friday and Saturday east of the Mississippi, but the prediction was for fair and colder, and the weather west of the river was clear and cold. A crop of 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn will be a record one and will come with a record crop of oats, of barley, of hay, nearly a record crop of wheat, and at a time when the supply of live stock in the country, judging by the movement, and the prices for live stock, is comparatively limited, so that the requirements for feeding will not be commensurate with the size of the crop. There is confidence, however, in a considerable export business. Europe has needed corn seriously this year, and since May 1 has imported 132,000,000 bushels of Argentine corn, and that country is still shipping 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 bushels of corn a week. The quotation for Argentine December corn in Liverpool is equal to about 2½c. a bushel under the seaboard quotation for American export corn f. o. b., but exporters state that bids are still further out of line; hence very little business can be effected.

OATS.—The market continues to rule very steady, and the position of the Western cash markets is firm. The interior movement of oats is heavy, but the shipments from interior points are equally heavy, and during the last week these shipments about equaled the receipts. With such a demand for oats at interior points for distribution, there is naturally very little pressure on the contract market, and, so long as such distribution keeps up, the hedge pressure against the crop movement is likely to be comparatively unimportant. This demand has kept up much longer than many anticipated, and shows a consumption of oats of very important proportions.

PROVISIONS.—Hog products have reacted sharply from the extreme prices. The reaction had been a very natural one following a material advance. This advance was the direct result evidently of rapidly decreasing stocks of all kinds of product. The loss in stocks of product since midsummer has been from one-third to two-thirds of the total stock in store at the maximum periods, and this distribution in face of steadily advancing prices naturally created material speculative confidence. There has been, however, disposition to realize speculative profits causing some reaction. The movement of hogs is still limited. Hog prices have reacted somewhat during the week with the contract market, but the decline has not been material. Prices for cattle have continued strong, and are at about record prices for the season, and there has been an advance in prices for sheep. The low price for feeding stuffs is not having the effect on supplies of live stock which speculative sellers were disposed to anticipate earlier in the season, and this has been somewhat of a factor in the advance. With the maintenance of price of live hogs, however, and the very important profits in feeding stock, there will be every effort made to increase the supply, although the actual increase may not become a market factor for some months to come.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The declining tendency of the market during the last week can be ascribed chiefly to a withdrawal of support. With the speculative inquiry dormant and consuming demand routine, it was natural for values to recede when prominent refining interests deserted their stand in absorbing offerings. It appeared as though freer crude sales were encountered on the moderate advance in quotations.

This was quite in line with expectations. No demoralization among holders of crude has been apparent, but with the gradual augmented movement of cotton it would only be consistent for accumulations to occur at the South and resultant pressure in the local future market. Of course, if the demand from users should expand considerably the aspect of the situation may change, but at present the inquiry from all sources is only fair in the aggregate.

Compound lard manufacturers are enjoying a good trade, due to the high levels of pure lard, and on this account it still seems as though packing interests are rendering the most effective support to cottonseed oil values. The foreign demand is sporadic and confined largely to the better descriptions of oil. The shortage in the olive oil crop abroad has had bearing, but as yet cotton oil values have not declined sufficiently to compete impressively with some of the other oils and greases. High freight rates are still a factor. The Balkan situation has not had material influence, although it is asserted that shipments to the countries involved have been hampered and in instances virtually discontinued.

On several occasions during the week there were premiums paid for spot oil, and the near deliveries remain comparatively steady, but it would be surprising if there is not a partial readjustment at least in the near future. Meanwhile there have been but few complaints from the cotton belt as to the maturing of the plant, and while the date of killing frost is still a factor there is less apprehension apparent and the tendency is for crop estimates to expand. Sentiment in speculative oil quarters is mixed, and rather inclined to the bear side, although kept within bounds by the realization that consumers' stocks are rather light. This suggests a moderate inquiry from time to time, which will probably be enlarged upon in the event of orderly receding quotations.

COTTON.

That the market had entered debatable ground was an admission made in several quarters where hitherto rather pronounced pessimistic views were entertained. Nothing approaching bullish enthusiasm was discerned, however, and it seems as though the realization that prices have suffered substantial declines constituted the basis for the modification of views. A nervous market was generally predicted for the next week or so, due to the fact that the average frost date has been about reached. Inasmuch as there has been drastic liquidation, it would be only fair to assume that a period of detrimental weather conditions in the immediate future would have material influence on price levels, but it is noticeable that less apprehension prevails as of this time than several weeks ago.

If, at a week hence, the cotton belt has escaped the frost, it is likely that the most optimistic of crop estimates will be current. A production well under last season seems to be admitted, but there is a conservative element in the trade now more willing to confess that the outlook of some time ago has almost steadily undergone betterment and that in the event of the plant being secured without important deterioration at this time the yield will easily exceed 14,000,000 bales. Whether or not levels closely approximating the prevailing basis would discount such a crop, following last year's enormous outturn and coming at a time when the increased foreign yields will very likely make up the deficiency in this country, is a matter of conjecture. Then, again, the knowledge of the world's visible and invisible supplies on the 1st of September having been more than 2,000,000 bales over those on Sept. 1, 1911, tends to restrict operations for a higher plane of values at present.

The theory that if cotton prices are to be advanced this season the stimulous will have to be consumption rather than production still obtains in many circles. Last year the market declined to below 9 cents on the weight of actual cotton, although later large gains occurred. How far the list will recede this season under the pressure of the new crop remains to be seen. A Census Bureau report was issued during the week giving the consumption of American cotton by American mills at 437,322 bales for the month, or on the basis of 5,250,000 bales per year. This was not particularly encouraging, as there have been estimates current of a probable absorption this year of close to 6,000,000 bales. However, a gradual increase in the amount used, as compared with the foregoing statistics, is to be looked for, as optimistic opinions concerning trade outlook rule.

Importations by foreign countries have also been smaller with these, about 300,000 bales under last season, since Sept. 1. The assumption is that surplus stocks at principal points are being drawn upon. Several factors have cropped up which have been commented upon, and are given in repudiation of statements concerning the good prospects of the trade in general, but these have been only lightly considered. The Balkan situation, for instance, has led to cancellations at Manchester, but unless one or more of the big powers are involved the war in Southeastern Europe will probably terminate without injuring the trade demand to an important degree. In this country buyers of the raw material have been urged to pursue a more cautious attitude on account of our own political conditions, while the depreciation of the value of the staple has not been ignored, but from nearly all sections are statements that mills are profitably engaged ahead, so that these temporary lulls will be comparatively inconsequential in effect.

The weather over the cotton belt during this last week when regarded from all angles could not be construed as ideal, yet it was not of a character to create uneasiness. Heavy rains were noted in Texas for a time, but it developed that this moisture was confined to a territory where the cotton had been almost entirely secured. At a later date there were moderate to heavy rains in central and eastern sections. This moisture served to interfere with the movement of the crop and impair the quality in some districts, but temperatures at all times were fairly seasonal.

In reflection of the satisfactory climatic conditions, the South continued a moderate seller in the way of hedges. On the lower basis reports emanated from various points of a tendency to hold back this season's crop with assertions that the cost of production had been reached. A larger inquiry from spinning sources was also manifest at the declines, which seemed to have decidedly more influence than the reports of a lighter volume of selling from first hands. It was apparent, however, that the demand from trade sources was not sufficiently urgent nor the indisposition to sell great enough to result in resiliency of quotations.

WABASH DEFICIT HEAVY.

Expenses $2,864,000 More Than Gross Earnings.

The Wabash Railroad's annual report for 1912, made public to-day, shows a deficit, after charges, amounting to $2,864,000. Last year the company had a deficit of only $403,000, and in the year before a surplus of $545,000. The road paid none of the $1,283,000 accruing as interest on the first refunding and extensions mortgage bonds.

The Wabash has been in the hands of receivers since Dec. 26, 1911, so that the report covers about half a year during which the property was managed by the Goulds and half a year by the receivers. Operating revenues decreased $1,529,000 during the period, while expenses increased $784,000. The total income amounted to $5,102,000, against which there were interest and other fixed charges totaling $7,966,000.

"The very unsatisfactory results were due both to diminished gross earnings—which other railroad companies in the same territory have suffered—and to an increase in expenses, largely on account of increased wages, new requirements of law, increased price of materials, and a very severe Winter.

"That the experience of the Wabash was worse than that of other companies may be largely attributed to the following reasons:

"First, that the expenses for maintenance of equipment and of way had long been on such a basis that no further reduction or economy was permissible.

"Second, to the temporary disturbance of patronage naturally incident to the institution of receivership proceedings.

"Third, that since the receivership began there has been a good deal of money spent in general rehabilitation work which has been charged in as an operating expense. Thus there was charged for maintenance of equipment $444,266 more than in the previous year, and for maintenance of way $259,827 more, a total of $704,093, which under ordinary and normal operations would have been spread through a period of years.

"Fourth, to the fact that in the last three months of the fiscal year a very large amount of construction work has been going on, to carry out improvements authorized by the United States Court and paid for out of receivers' certificates. This work has involved the handling of a great quantity of material for which the company received no revenue, and it has required the operation of many construction trains, which not only did not increase revenue, but interfered with, and, therefore, increased the cost of operation.

"During the fiscal year the railroad received practically no benefit whatever from the large expenditures authorized by the court, for, with the sole exception of the receipt of some new locomotives, none of the newly purchased equipment had arrived, and the work of constructing additional tracks, terminal facilities, shop and building improvements, &c., had none of it been completed."

The Burlington Railway & Light Co. owns and operates a system of electric street railways comprising about 18½ miles of track in Burlington, Iowa, and its suburbs, serving a total population of about 30,000. It does the entire municipal and commercial electric lighting and power business in this territory and owns and operates in Burlington a gas plant and a steam heating plant.

The salient features of these bonds are set forth in a letter from the President of the Company, portions of such letter being summarized as follows:

1. First mortgage on all the property and franchises of the company, now owned or hereafter acquired.
2. Replacement value of physical property $1,746,000. Expenditures forthwith for additions $200,000, total $1,946,000, or one-half million dollars in excess of bonds outstanding.
3. Street railway franchises unlimited as to time, except two suburban extensions of minor importance.
4. Sinking fund 5 per cent of annual gross earnings.
5. Additional bonds can be issued for 80 per cent of cost of additions and improvements when net earnings for the twelve months preceding are double the interest charges on bonds outstanding and those proposed to be issued.
6. Net earnings for the last five years have averaged $184,000 per annum. Net income for 1911 $151,768—more than twice interest charges on these bonds.

The legality of the bond issue has been approved by Messrs. Murray, Prentice & Howland and Messrs. Gannon, Seibert & Riggs, both of New York. The accounts have been audited by Haskins & Sells, Certified Public Accountants, and the physical property examined by Westinghouse Church Kerr & Co. and J. G. White & Co., Engineers.

How the Banks Stand

The reports of over seven thousand National banks in this country, summarized by the Controller of the Currency, contain a mass of information that at first sight seems dry and of little use to the ordinary merchant. They tell, however, the story of business conditions, and also of the credit position of the banks. It is not generally known that the banks are to-day extending loans on a slimmer basis of money reserves than before the panic in 1907. Details and special tables of statistics covering this point will appear in

THE BUSINESS WORLD

Fifty-seven Changes Noted Last Week—Many Foodstuffs Advanced.

There was a slight increase last week in the number of fluctuations indicated in Dun's list of minimum wholesale prices quoted in the New York and near-by markets. Fifty-seven changes were shown, of which forty-two were advances and the remainder declines. Fourteen commodities classed as foodstuffs showed higher levels, against five declines. Other changes of note were in the markets for drugs, chemicals and oils, hides and leather and metals. The latter market showed eleven advances and four declines, while hides and leather showed seven and none, respectively. Five declines were indicated in the drug, chemical, and oil field, against four advances. Six of the advances were quoted at levels lower than those of a year ago, while two of the declines claimed similar distinction.

KNIT GOODS MARKET STEADY.

Underwear Trade Looking Forward to Fall (1913) Opening.

With the present season practically completed, and the best part of the coming Spring's business booked, the attention of the local knit goods trade is now turned to the opening of the Fall (1913) season. From all accounts, however, this opening is of more consequence at the moment to the underwear branch of the trade than to the hosiery. Here the usual post-election opening is looked for, despite the fact that the turning out of sample lines at this time is probably a hardship to the mills in their present rushed condition. This market now is, in the opinion of trade authorities, essentially a seller's market, and in certain quarters the belief is held that to open at the usual time this year is to invite the loss of a good share of this advantage. Substantiating this belief, the argument is given that so far the wholesalers have shown little inclination to buy, and the late buying of the jobbers this year is also pointed out. Spring duplicates are coming in well in the primary market, and reports from the jobbing trade indicate better business than was done last year.

The hosiery market presents no feature at the moment, aside from the continued demand for Fall merchandise. Here also there has been a fair share of duplicate Spring business done. Higher prices are predicted for silk hose as a result of the advancing market for the raw material.

NORTHERN PACIFIC REPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 20.—The annual report of the Northern Pacific Railway, issued to-day for the year ending June 30, shows that the freight revenue amounted to $43,793,521, an increase of $460,603 over the previous year. The passenger revenue, amounting to $15,843,752, showed a decrease of $1,935,060.

The total operating revenue amounted to $63,423,946, as compared to $64,912,831, a decrease of $1,488,885. The operating expense showed a total decrease of $1,151,243, but the traffic expense increased $75,059. During the year 5,051,181,481 tons of revenue freight were moved one mile, an increase of 250,515,455 tons, or a little more than 5 per cent. The average mileage operated during the year was 6,025, an increase of slightly more than fourteen miles.

A comparative statement of equipment shows that the company operates only 1,416 engines as against 1,441 a year ago. The road has 1,161 passenger cars, 43,220 freight cars, and with cabooses and all other cars, has a miscellaneous equipment in addition to the others of 6,567, an increase of 107.

In the land department the net sales of land aggregated 54,288 acres and the consideration was $1,524,073. The number of passengers carried was 8,661,643 as against 9,262,853 the previous year.

E. M. SHEPARD PARK ASSURED

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Oct. 20.—The deed for the Edward M. Shepard memorial park will be delivered to-day. The raising of the $10,000 to purchase a valuable piece of property with several hundred feet shore line has occupied a year. Personal subscriptions, open-air festivals, and a pageant have been the sources of the money raised. All the contributions have been in comparatively small amounts. Many of the subscriptions were from Mr. Shepard's former employes and the young people of the village.

Among the contributors are the Rev. E. M. Stires of New York, the Misses Stebbin of Pittsfield, H. W. Guernsey, William Mitchell, R. E. Leffingwell, and Charles S. Shepard, all of New York.

The park will be under the jurisdiction of the village corporation, and will be open to the public at all times. As a further memorial to Mr. Shepard, a two-manual pipe organ has been installed in the St. James Episcopal Church of Lake George village, of which he was a member and officer for many years. The organ is the gift of Mrs. Agnes Hewitt and Charles Shepard, his sister and brother.

WOULD RECALL FRANCHISES.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 20.—Recall of franchises is one of the issues that is being thrashed out in the Gubernatorial campaign in this State. P. M. Ringdal, the Democratic nominee for Governor, is making a strong issue of this proposal: "As a defensive measure against oppression by public service corporations the Constitution should provide means whereby, if the majority so decides, any public utility may become the property of the public served thereby upon payment of a fair price."

Mr. Ringdal charges that Gov. Eberhart's administration has been characterized by favoritism to special interests and that the public service corporations of Minnesota have been particularly indifferent to the people's interests because they have felt certain of their control of the State Government. Here are some other features of his brief platform:

> A commission with ample power to supervise and control our public utilities and to secure good service on fair and equal terms to all.
> Changes in our system of taxation so that improvements rather than speculation shall be encouraged. The farmer and the workman whose industry gives us food and clothing should not be penalized for the benefit of those who hold land in idleness. The manufacturer and the merchant should not be penalized for the benefit of speculators. The home should not be burdened with taxes that ought to fall on privilege.
> Industry should bear the burden of accidents to those who serve it. The law should secure fair compensation to the injured workman or to his family in case of death.

Mr. Ringdal also believes in the initiative and referendum, though he declares that the representative system should be relied upon in general for legislation. It is probable that he will be elected, as the Republicans are badly split by the Roosevelt and Taft candidacies and by the differences between Senators Nelson and Clapp.

CRUDE RUBBER PRICES DOWN.

Para and Plantation Grades Weak—Local Demand Uneven.

Last week in the local crude rubber market was featured by more than the usual number of price fluctuations. Stimulated by the slight gain in the English market near the close of the previous week, local quotations on up-river fine opened a full cent a pound higher. This level did not prevail long, however, and closing prices for this grade were down two cents. Up-river coarse and island fine and coarse shared this decline. The plantation grades were also weaker here in sympathy with the easier tone on the other side, and at the close Ceylon, biscuits and sheets, was down four to five cents. East India smoked sheets and pale crepe reflected this drop to the extent of five or six cents.

While reports from various quarters of the market were indicative of uneven trading, as is usual on a declining market, sellers for the most part were not overactive. Some consumers were evidently attracted by the low figures named, but the majority of buyers refused to anticipate the more distant future in the belief that bottom had not yet been reached.

The week's trading in the foreign markets was rather featureless. Buyers were not active in London, and the majority of local declines found inspiration in the easy tone of that market. What effect the holding of the regular fortnightly auction, which is scheduled to begin in London on Tuesday, will have on the general market is problematical.

CANNED GOODS QUIET.

Demand Fairly Active in Vegetables, but Fruit and Fish Slow.

Aside from certain grades of Maryland tomatoes and fancy Maine corn, canned vegetables did not receive a great amount of attention in the local market last week. The current year's pack of corn in both Maine and New York State was reported below normal, and while buyers were by no means inclined to plunge, there was an appreciable increase in the call for spot stocks compared with that of the previous week. Really desirable brands of Western and Southern corn are now well sold up, and there is a distinct upward tendency in the prices of these grades. Offerings of fancy peas were limited by the smallness of available supplies, and this end of the market was generally firm. Beans held a similar position.

The canned fruit end of the market was again featureless. Little real activity is looked for here until fresh fruits are well consumed. Packers of gallon apples evince a strong desire to obtain higher prices for their current offerings. The demand for canned fish was generally limited. Salmon did not move very freely, and, despite the strong possibility of higher prices in the near future, the demand for domestic sardines did not show an appreciable improvement. The imported brands were firmly held as a result of the poor catch this season on the ohter side.

A BOUNTIFUL POTATO CROP.

Special to The New York Times.

YORK, Penn., Oct. 20.—From the section of York County known as the "potato belt" come reports of a record yield of potatoes to the acre. Growers in Fawn, Chanceford, Hopewell, and Shrewsbury Townships announce a harvest of from 300 to 400 bushels an acre, some saying that they have a crop as high as 450 to 475 bushels.

Officials of the Stewartstown & Fawn Grove Railroad, which passes through this part of York County, declare that more potatoes have been shipped over their line this Fall to the Western and Northern markets than ever before.

From every section of the county it is reported that the potato crop is greater than at any period within twenty-five years.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Upon the application of Williams, McConnell & Coleman, the Listing Committee of the Curb Market Association has admitted to quotation 164,440 shares of the common stock of the Chicago Utilities Company, 246,585 shares of the preferred stock of par value, temporary certificates, and the $4,107,000, Series A first mortgage, 5 per cent. bonds, due 1942, and $4,000,000 Series B, 5 per cents.

The New York branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank, Ltd., has received the sixty-fifth semi-annual report to shareholders, presented at the annual meeting on Sept. 10 in Yokohama. It shows total assets of 308,421,325 yen, or approximately $154,000,000. Profit for the half-year was 2,153,622 yen, about $1,076,811. This swelled by the amount brought forward from the last account, left a balance for appropriation of 3,348,759 yen, out of which the Directors recommended a dividend of 1,800,000 yen to be paid, about 12 per cent. on the bank's capital, and 850,000 yen to be added to the reserve fund.

GOVERNORS WELCOME TAFT'S SUGGESTION

DIX FOR FEDERAL CONTROL

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 20.—Gov. Dix to-day gave out a statement having to do with the letter of President Taft to the Governors of the various States, relative to financing farmers at a smaller rate of interest on the money advanced. His statement is as follows:

"President Taft has written me, submitting the results of his reference to the Ambassadors of foreign countries of the idea of establishing in this country a credit system to enable the farmers to finance permament improvements at a lesser rate of interest than they are at present obliged to pay, and requesting expressions of opinion from the various Governors on the subject.

"My suggestion is that it should be done under Federal supervision, and that a commission be appointed to investigate the whole subject. That it should cooperate with, and not antagonize, the banking system. That the commission should be composed of members selected by the State granges, the State agricultural departments, a representative business man and a representative banker. The plan should combine the best features now in vogue in other countries, that we may make steps in advance which we will not later have to retrace, remembering that conditions in this country are materially different from those prevailing in other countries.

"The President has invited the Executives of the various States to meet him in Washington in December, following the conference of Governors at Richmond, in order that they may fully discuss the subject; and it is my hope to attend both meetings."

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—Governor Foss has acknowledged President Taft's letter in these words:

"Your recommendation for the establishment of land mortgage banks under State supervision, and following substantially the system established in Germany, appeals strongly to me as a measure calculated to confer great benefit upon our agricultural communities.

"The annual production of the farms, like the annual production of our various mills and factories, must be handled more or less on borrowed money, and it is extremely unfair that the farmer must pay practically twice the rate of interest which prevails in the commercial world.

"I thank you sincerely on behalf of the people of Massachusetts for bringing this matter to my attention in the form of your letter and the preliminary report transmitted therewith.

"This subject is probably one of the most important ones upon which uniform State legislation should be sought.

"I believe that the next conference of Governors will gladly accept your invitation for a conference with you in Washington, and that through concurrent action among the States the movement toward better financial conditions for the farmer can be well established.

"At the forthcoming conference of Governors I have been personally assigned the work of taking up the problem of uniform and concurrent action by the several States toward the development of inland waterways as a means of reducing the cost of transportation. But inasmuch as you specifically recommend the existing Massachusetts Credit Union Law, I am sending to Governor McGovern, who, I understand, is arranging the programme for the forthcoming Governors' Conference, several copies of the Massachusetts Credit Union Law, for distribution among the Governors who may be assigned to the discussion of your recommendations."

GOLF "PROS" AT ENGLEWOOD.

Golf at its best entertained a gallery of several hundred people on the links of the Englewood Country Club yesterday when in a professional four-ball match Aleck Smith of Wykagyl and Jack Hobens of the home club defeated J. J. McDermott of Atlantic City, the National open champion, and Tom McNamara of Boston. The margin in favor of the Scots was 3 up and 2 to play. They won because of superior team work, and it rarely happened that both "fell down" at the same hole.

Hobens was at his best throughout the day, bringing off long putts on a number of occasions that must have been disconcerting to the home breds. In justice to McDermott it may be said that the champion played sound golf throughout, whereas his partner was not up to the form that carried him to the fore in the Metropolitan open at Apawamis last Summer. Off the tee McNamara was also much shorter than the others.

Failure to hole short putts on the homeward journey in the afternoon cost McDermott and McNamara the match, for until this unsteadiness on the greens overtook them they were in the lead. These lapses took place in the eleventh, fifteenth, and seventeenth greens. The steadiness of Smith and Hobens was further demonstrated in the fact that both rounds their best ball totalled 69. In the morning at the sixteenth McNamara holed a chip shot from off the green for a 4, while after luncheon Hobens got down a good putt on the thirteenth green. The best ball cards were as follows:

Twelve prizes were competed for at the club on Saturday on the occasion of the club's anniversary. At the annual dinner in the evening more than 200 covers were laid.

On the links during the afternoon a special eighteen-hole medal-play handicap for guests was run off, the four prize winners and their scores being as follows: A. S. Trippe, 91, 20—71; G. W. Johnson, 87, 15—72; A. C. Sherwood, 93, 20—73, and T. R. Fell, 90, 16—74. In the four-ball foursomes handicap for Classes A and B, John Naething and E. M. Barnes won in the A set, with a card of 69, 3—66, while in the other Class S. A. Cunningham and W. A. Barber showed the way with 82, 13—69. The Dinner Cup, presented by F. P. Duryea, was won by Naething, with a card of 74, 5—69. There was also a selected score prize, contestants taking their score from two rounds of the links. This resulted favorably to Oswald Kirkby, who corralled a 67. The competition in two classes for the season's composite score for prizes presented by W. C. Freeman, was also completed. In Class A, N. Peters and H. M. Coxe tied, with respective cards of 58, 5—53 and 55, 2—53. They will settle the tie in the near future. The Class A cup was won by W. V. Bennett, with 64, 5—59. One-third of the regular medal-play handicaps were allowed in this competition.

PACERS MAKE FAST TIME.

Dick Mason Covers Half Mile on Speedway in One Minute.

In winning the Class A pace, the feature event of the seventh matinee of the Road Drivers' Fall season, yesterday, on the Speedway, H. B. Clarke's black pacer, Dick Mason, established a two-heat record when he traversed the first and third heats of the race in 1:00 and 1:01. The race went to three heats for a decision, with Dick Mason losing the second one to J. H. Lawrence's bay gelding, Nelson H., when the Clarke entry went to a break in the first quarter and finished in third position. Had it not been for the break Dick Mason would have won in straight heats, as he was in the lead at the time.

The time of the first heat, 1:00, equaled the record for the Drive for competition, although it was stated that a heat one-quarter of a second faster had been done by a pacer some time ago, but not in a matinee race. The performance of Dick Mason in equaling the record and then coming back in the third heat and winning in only one second slower was never before witnessed on the Drive.

Dick Mason and Clover Patch, owned and driven by I. V. Hunt, have been fighting for the supremacy of their division from the outset of the season, but yesterday's performance of the Clarke horse gives him a commanding lead. The second heat of the race, which went to J. H. Lawrence's Nelson H., was also a fast brush, as the timers caught the winner at the wire in 1:01¾.

Aside from the regular programme, which comprised ten events, the Brush Committee arranged for a special exhibition between James F. Murphy's black pacing mare Coast Marie, 2:11¼, and Christopher Hackett's old-time favorite black gelding, Who Knows, 2:11¾. Coast Marie took the laurels in straight heats, but in doing so was forced to its limit throughout, winning by only a scant margin in each meeting. In the first heat the timers failed to get their watches going, but the second heat was timed in 1:04¼. The summaries:

FOOTBALL PLAYERS CLASH.

Soccer and Rugby Teams Want to Use Ground at Same Time.

Soccer and rugby players clashed yesterday afternoon at Hawthorne Field, Brooklyn, when a dispute arose who had the right to use the field. The New York Celtics and Critchleys, the soccer contingents, arrived at the grounds early, and had the first half well under way when the rugby players put in their appearance. Immediately the latter players insisted that they had permission to use the grounds, and when half time was called the rugby players swarmed on the field and began their game.

Although many protests were made they could not be induced to leave the gridiron, and they stayed there until 5:30 o'clock. At that hour the soccer players resumed their contest, the Celtics leading by one goal to nothing, the point being tallied by Humble, who converted a corner kick. A few minutes after the resumption of play N. Agar tallied for the Critchleys, evening matters up. Shortly thereafter darkness enveloped the field, and the referee called the game, with twenty minutes of time unplayed. After the game the New York Celtics said they would take the matter up with the Executive Board of the league, claiming that the Critchleys, being the home team, should have the ground in playable condition.

By the score of 7 goals to 1 the Fulton F. C. defeated the German eleven of the Metropolitan League in a friendly contest at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday afternoon. Jones was in fine fettle for the winners, scoring 5 goals, the highest number made by a player in a single game so far this season.

By superior combination work the St. George United easily defeated the eleven of the Spanish-American F. C. at Macomb's Dam Park by 6 goals to 0.

A one-sided game resulted in the encounter between the German F. C. and the Longfellow squad in a second division league contest, played at Columbia Oval. The score was 7 goals to 0.

In a first section game of the New York State League played at Yonkers yesterday the St. George F. C. went down to defeat at the hands of the Yonkers outfit by the close score of 1 to 0.

In a championship game of the New York State League, played at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday afternoon, the Clan McDuffs easily won their encounter with the Hungarian eleven by 2 goals to 0.

A no-scoring game resulted in the contest between the Eureka and Columbia Oval elevens at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday. The game was nip and tuck throughout.

AGED AUTHOR CAUSES PUBLISHER'S ARREST

LETTER DISPLEASED JUDGE

Neale Wrote Her of Booklet He Planned, Attacking Her and Her Book He Had Published.

Charged with violating that section of the penal law that relates to the sending of a threatening letter, Walter Neale, President of the Neale Publishing Company, Union Square, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Barlow, in the Jefferson Market Court. He was arrested on the complaint of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Meriwether, who wrote "The Sowing of Swords; or, the Soul of the Sixties," for the publishing house, and afterward came to loggerheads with its head.

Although a woman in her ninetieth year, she journeyed from St. Louis to sue the company for the recovery of $600 and to annul their contract, and she was greatly downcast last week when Supreme Court Justice Kelly, in Brooklyn, dismissed her case. But in the course of the plaintiff's evidence many letters from the publishers were offered, and one of them so displeased the Judge that he said it looked to him like an attempt at blackmail, and he further suggested that Lee Meriwether, the plaintiff's son and counsel, would do well to show the letter to the District Attorney. It was carried over to Mr. Whitman's office, and subsequently, on the urging of Assistant District Attorney Dickinson, a warrant was reluctantly issued by Magistrate Barlow. Here is part of the letter:

"If, however, I shall find that in the future you utter one offensive word against me or against my company, immediately, and without further notification to you, I shall undertake to protect myself and my company against all such future attacks in the following manner:

"I shall print 50,000 copies of a booklet made up of my letter to you of Jan. 25, 1911; a photographic reproduction of a page of your manuscript, such as I enclose, marking the changes made, such a page showing, as does the specimen I inclose, ninety-one alterations or more, including words and phrases written in by us; photographic reproductions of parts of letters that we have received of your late husband, of your son, and of yourself; reprints of parts of the letter that you addressed to one of our authors, when you found that you had been caught in the act, and that you could not make a pal of her; excerpts from the reviews of your book, such as the choice selection that I inclose to you herewith, and also I shall publish other exhibits of a kind that I shall not mention now. All these papers I can issue in a booklet at a small cost to my company, and these I shall circulate among the members of the United Confederate Veterans, the Daughters of the Confederacy, and like organizations; among authors, and among persons well known in St. Louis. All this we can do at a slight expense, for we issue hundreds of thousands of circulars a year, and to include with our other inclosures such a booklet presented on this paper, with a cost to us of but little.

"I have said I have no wish to hurt you unnecessarily, nor to hurt any person 87 years old; nor do I harbor any feeling of animosity toward lunatics, the decrepit aged, nor to irresponsible children. A pity that you should not be cared for by your friends, if you have any, and that they should not prevent the injury that you are doing to yourself in your condition of irresponsibility.

"If the purpose of your letters is to endeavor to get me to get my house to relinquish its rights under the contract that relate to the book, then you fail dismally, I assure you. We shall not relinquish a single right under the contract; we shall not terminate that instrument until the time that we are required to do so under its terms. No form of blackmail, attempted or perpetrated, has ever succeeded in intimidating this company nor any one of its officers."

Hearing in the case was put over till to-day, and Mr. Neale was paroled in the custody of his lawyer, Almuth C. Vandiver. In a brief statement Mr. Neale said that the book had been brought forth strictly in accordance with the terms of the contract, and that at all stages of preparation and advertisement Mrs. Meriwether had repeatedly expressed her approval of the manner in which it was being produced.

Mrs. Meriwether is the widow of Col. Minor Meriwether, military aid to President Davis in the days of the Confederacy.

To the Magistrate Mr. Neale's lawyer submitted a succession of letters from Mrs. Meriweather as tending to show the provocation for the letter to which she objected. Her letters spoke vaguely of fraud orders and of circularizing his authors with her own version of her complaint against his treatment, and it was argued that his retort was simply a promise to see that those authors got the whole story. It was intimated in court that the botom fact in Mrs. Meriweather's agitation was that her book had not yet proved a howling financial success.

RUNAWAY CHAUFFEUR HELD.

Killed a Man, and Coroner Intends to Keep Him in Tombs.

Coroner Feinberg yesterday held Rocco Pisculli of 275 East 153d Street in $10,000 bail on the assumption that he was the chauffeur of the automobile which caused the death of William P. King, a hotel keeper of 39 Cooper Square, in Cooper Square on Friday morning. According to the police, Pisculli admits the charge.

A policeman on stationary post caught the number of the automobile as it flashed into Broadway from Eighth Street after running down King, and it was traced to the International Garage, 252 West Fortieth Street.

"It seems to be a very flagrant case," said Coroner Feinberg last night. "It was a felony, in the first place, to take the car out without permission, and this the prisoner did. I set bail at $10,000, and he has been sent to the Tombs in default of it. If I find he can get that amount of bail, I will raise it, unless some redeeming feature of the case can be shown. At the present time it seems as bad a case as any that ever came before me."

John Bauer, a porter of 620 Eighth Avenue, said to have been in the car, was sent to the House of Detention.

KILLED IN STEVENS AUTO.

While riding in an automobile owned by Richard Stevens of Castle Point, Hoboken, which had been taken out without the owner's permission and was being driven by a man who not only did not have a license but knew little about operating it, Harry Lueps, 20 years of age, of 1,033 Washington Street, Hoboken, was so badly injured yesterday that he died in Christ Hospital, in Jersey City, shortly after the accident. He had been thrown from the machine against a tree, fracturing his skull.

The youth who was driving the machine, George Vogel, 20 years of age, of 225 Hudson Street, Hoboken, was later arrested and charged with violating the State automobile law.

Vogel is employed by Richard Stevens at Castle Point as a laborer. He was never allowed to use the automobiles in the place. Yesterday he conceived the idea of taking some of his friends on a ride about the Castle Point grounds while Mr. Stevens was away from the house. Vogel called up Lueps and Frank McKernan, 17 years old, of 729 Washington Street, Hoboken, and they soon joined Vogel at the Stevens place. Vogel got one of the machines out of the garage, and with his two companions ran around inside the grounds. On the second lap something went wrong, and the machine smashed into a large tree just off the road. Lueps, who was sitting on the front seat with Vogel, was hurled head first against the tree. Neither of the other two young men were thrown out, but they were both injured. Vogel had his left leg badly crushed and McKernan had both his legs injured and cut.

The police were notified of the accident, and they arrested Vogel for taking the car out without the owner's permission, and also because he had no license to run an automobile.

AUTOS STRIKE BOY SKATERS.

One Will Be a Cripple for Life and the Other Has a Broken Leg.

John Gorry, 10 years old, who lived with his parents at 1,540 Vermilye Avenue, the Bronx, was roller skating with a number of companions yesterday afternoon from the bottom of Sherman Avenue up to where it ends in East 168th Street. To travel this distance, the boys generally caught on behind some slow moving automobile, and then let go when the car came to the end of the avenue. An automobile from which John Gorry was taking a tow put on too much speed for the youngster, and he released his hold so suddenly that he had no time to get out of the way of another car which was following close behind.

Before the owner of this second car, Samuel S. Long of 290 West Ninetieth Street, had time to apply the brakes the wheels had passed over the boy's body. The car was stopped and the boy taken into the tonneau, where Miss M. Long and H. W. Post of 507 West 113th Street tried to bandage up his wounds while Mr. Long made the six-mile run to the Fordham Hospital. At the hospital Dr. Schaffer found the boy suffering from a compound fracture of the right thigh and contusions on the head. It is probable that he will live, but the injuries may result in his being a cripple for life.

A few hours later Benjamin Desowitz, 6 years old, who lives at 1,503 Charlotte Street, while roller skating on 170th Street, near Charlotte Street, was run down by an automobile driven by Dr. B. K. Kantrowitz of 1,718 East Sixty-third Street, with Dr. J. Seltman on the seat by his side. The doctors attended the boy, and then took him to the Fordham Hospital, where it was found that his leg was fractured just below the thigh bone.

J. J. O'BRIEN HURT IN AUTO.

Ex-Policeman, Known as "Constitutional" O'Brien, in Hospital.

James J. O'Brien, known all over the city as "Constitutional" O'Brien because of the fact that when he was a policeman he used to back up his charge against a prisoner by quoting the law to the Magistrate, was severely injured in an automobile accident yesterday afternoon. He is in St. John's Hospital in Long Island City, in a serious condition.

O'Brien, who retired from the police force about five years ago, is one of the best known citizens of Queens Borough, and lives in Elmhurst. He and his daughters were in their automobile when it skidded out of Thompson Avenue into Hulse Street. O'Brien was thrown from his seat to the pavement. He suffered a broken left arm and two broken ribs on the left side. Dr. Harris of Manhattan, who was passing in his machine, picked him up and hurried with him to St. John's Hospital.

Miss O'Brien drove the damaged car home.

Since his retirement from the police force O'Brien has been a builder and is quite well to do.

AUTO STRUCK AT CROSSING.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Foster Dyer of Endicott was mortally hurt, and four companions, Mrs. Dyer and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Welsh and Earl Grippin, all of Endicott, were seriously injured as a result of Mr. Grippin's car being struck by a train on a grade crossing of the Montrose & Alvord Division of the Lackawanna Railroad, near Heart Lake Station, this morning.

On a pleasure trip, the automobile party was about to pass over the crossing when Mr. Grippin, at the wheel, saw the train coming, and stopped his car in the endeavor to back up. His engine was stalled, and in the crash that followed the members of the party were thrown 100 feet.

The injured were picked up, taken to Montrose, and rushed to Binghamton on a train reaching here this afternoon, where they were taken to the hospital. Mr. Dyer was suffering from a compound fracture of the right thigh, and it became necessary to amputate the leg. He died to-night.

To Plan Big Conference of Nurses.

Executive Committees of the American Nurses' Association, the National Organization of Public Health Nursing, and the American League of Nursing Education will meet in the Park Avenue Hotel to-day to arrange the programme for the annual meeting of the three organizations in joint session in Atlantic City next May. Miss Jane A. Delano will preside over the joint session of the committees, among the members of which are Miss Isabel MacIsaac, President of the American Nurses' Association; Miss Mary A. Wheeler, President of the American League of Nursing Education, and Miss Lillian Wall, President of the National Organization of Public Health Nursing.

WHITE LIGHTS NO BAR TO THESE BURGLARS

WATCHMEN DIDN'T SEE THEM

Neither Did Other Night Workers in the Neighborhood — Used an Auto, Detective Thinks.

The watchfulness of two men who guard the Fifth Avenue Building at night, the bright lights of Broadway at Twenty-fourth Street, and the almost continuous presence across the street of either the taxicab starter or the night clerk of the Hotel Albemarle did not interfere with burglars who made a careful selection of $2,500 worth of haberdashery from George G. Benjamin's store in the Fifth Avenue Building and took it away on Sunday night of last week.

Two fur-lined great coats, four traveling bags, one suitcase, twenty scarfpins, 100 pairs of cuff links, twenty-five watch fobs, and much silk underwear were the items selected by the discriminating burglars. The boldness of the job was shown by the fact that the links and fobs were taken by the trayful from the big show window that looks out on Madison Square.

Detective Scanlon, who has been at work on the case, is sure that at least two men were concerned in the robbery. And even two men could hardly have carried away the plunder at one trip, so the detective thinks that possibly they used an automobile.

To get into the store the robbers forced the transom over the Twenty-fourth Street entrance. The marks of a jimmy were found there next morning and fingerprints galore, but these were so deep in dust that they afforded no material value to the Identification Bureau. Unless the breaking of the transom rod was all an elaborate deception, the burglars climbed in that way, and they probably did the jimmy work by one man standing on the other's back.

The Fifth Avenue Building has two night watchmen, one assigned to inside duty and one who prowls about the exterior of the structure. He prowled in vain last Sunday night. Neither of the night attaches of the Albemarle Hotel say anything of thieves or auto on that night. But for all that Bejamin's stock is short $2,500 in haberdashery.

Other stories of recent burglaries are beginning to become known. A near-burglary agitated Otto Steiners, a Union Square jeweler, who lives in Haven Avenue, near West 169th Street. His house was entered on Saturday evening, and the burglar devoted his attention to two trunks in the basement. He had selected an assortment of articles from one and was just loosening the straps from another when he was frightened away.

On the night before the home of Benjamin Nieberg at 500 West 175th Street was entered, and valuables worth $3,000 were taken. This is the latest of a succession of burglaries on Washington Heights.

AUTO ASTRAY KILLS CHILD.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 20.—Struck by an automobile which ran up on the sidewalk where he was walking with his father this afternoon Vincent Budd Hauck, 2 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence J. Hauck of 572 Cherry Street, was instantly killed and his father was so severely injured that he had to be taken to the General Hospital. Internal injuries that may prove fatal are feared. The automobile was owned and driven by George S. Mawhinney of 290 Heberton Avenue, Port Richmond, S. I. When it ran up on the walk it also struck a baby carriage containing Mr. Hauck's six months' old infant. The carriage was demolished, but the infant was unhurt. Mawhinney was arrested and held in $4,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter. His wife and Mr. and Mrs. William T. Holt, who were with him in the car, were held as witnesses, as also was Dr. T. E. V. Bleick of 433 Elizabeth Avenue, Newark. The latter was held as a material witness under $2,000 bail

RUNAWAY COUPLE IN JAIL.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Oct. 20.—Arrested after a sixteen-months chase that led them into Europe and South America, Albert H. Bitter, said to be a wealthy piano manufacturer of Milwaukee, 27 years old and married, and Miss Freda Norman, his former stenographer, just 18, are in jail here awaiting the arrival of Milwaukee officials.

There is a charge of abduction against Bitter in Milwaukee, according to telegraphic advices from the chief of police of that city. Miss Norman declares that in June, 1911, Bitter drew a revolver and threatened her life if she would not go away with him. Bitter, while admitting the elopement, denies the revolver incident, and says the girl went with him willingly.

After wandering from city to city in Europe and South America, Bitter and his companion eventually landed in New York, and there in May last the girl gave birth to a daughter. Bitter's funds were exhausted and he sought work as a piano tuner. A month ago they came to Bradley Beach. Bitter found jobs up and down the coast.

Neighbors with whom Miss Norman became friendly noticed lately that the girl was depressed. Lately she had shown a desire to talk about her former home, and day before yesterday she told her story to a neighbor, and it eventually found its way to the police.

The running time between the Pennsylvania Station and Whitestone Landing will be reduced from thirty-five minutes to twenty-three and twenty-six minutes, according to length of stops.
